Rheumatism! Kidney Diseases!

Dyspepsia! Diseases Peculiar to Women! Loss of Appetite!

Insomnia!

Nervous Prostration! General Debility

Prof. J. R. Blake, Sr., of Greenwood, S. C

Prof. J. R. Blake, Sr., of Greenwood, S. C recently visited the resort, and gives the result of his observations in the following extract clipped from the Greenwood Tribune:

The carative value of the place for some diseases is very remarkable. Rheumatism, dyspepsia, paralysis and some forms of nervousness were signally relieved in individuals coming under my personal observation; one young man from McCormick, S. C., who had been prostrated for seventeen months by deranged digestion, was thoroughly cured, gaining eighteen pounds in one month. An elderly gentleman from Penfield, Ga., who had been partially paralyzed on one side for eight years, arrived at the shaft in the same hack with myself. His right hand was disabled, and he walked with great difficulty when he arrived, but after six days in the shaft he could write letters to his family, and walked with comparative ease about the grounds. Many such cases are reported by reliable persons familiar with the history of the place.

Now as to the remedial agencies at work in effecting these wonderful cures, I must speak with more caution. A very common impression prevailing at a distance is that the relief with more caution. A very common impression prevailing at a distance is that the relief afforded partakes of the nature of the "faith cures" of which we hear so much; but no one can remain long at the place without being convinced that this hypothesis is indefensible. In many cases cures come to the incredulous, and in spite of all the laws of faith. The prevailing theory among the visitors at the shaft is that the effect is produced from electricity derived from the walls and earth floor of the rooms. To test this belief in some practical form I made the following experiment: Two No. 16 copper wires, each 12 feet long, were inserted into the walls at opposite corners of shaft No. 1. In the absence of a scientific galvometer, I introduced into the circuit of these wires several of the most equable and selfpoised patients who were present, to see if they could detect any current from the wall through the wires. Six persons were introduced in the wires. Six persons were introduced in succession, and all except one claimed to feel succession, and all except one claimed to feel in the wires the same tingling sensations which they derived directly from the wall. Of course, excited imagination and nervous irritability are unknown quantities which cannot be eliminated from this problem, so long as the human system is employed in its solution, but it is scarcely credible that so many reliable and sober persons would be mistaken in identifying the sensation derived from the wires with the sensation given by the walls. There is much difficulty still remaining in this problem, as to the origin of the electricity, the irregular fitful way in which it acts, and many other points suggested by the abnormal conditions of the case.

Among the remedial agencies at work, the excellent mineral water cannot be overlooked, indeed, I was at first disposed to ascribe all the cures chiefly to this agent, which is obtained in abundance from pumps in the corners of the shafts, and freely used by the patients.

Washington, Ga., January 23, 1888.—Mr. James A. Benson, President: I certify that for ten years I have been a great sufferer with rheumatism, which became very much aggravated in the last two or three years. At times I was confined to my bed and house; was unable to walk without crutches, and was compelled to give up all work. My sufferings were intense. I applied to different doctors for relief, but experienced none from their treatment. Last summer I visited the Electric Health Resort at Hillman, and after staying there awhile and drinking the Electric Waters, my rheumatism was entirely cured, and I have not had the slightest return of it. It gives me great pleasure to testify to the great healing properties of this wonderful place and its waters, and nothing that I could say would too strongly express my confidence in its virtues.

EDWARD BONNER.

WASHINGTON, Ga., January 19.—Mr. James A. Benson, President: I take pleasure in bearing testimony to the remarkable virtues of the Electric Health Resort. My little daughter, Bessie, 10 years old, had an attack of a very serious nature, affecting her neck, in June last.

Alarmed at her condition, I had her treated by the most skillful physicians in this place and Atlanta, who used artificial electricity and other remedies. In September she was still suffering, and no change perceptible, when, as a last resort, we went to the electric shaft. She only went twice. The first visit improved her, and the second night she remained all night in the rooms, and came home completely restored and has remained so. These are facts, and I state them with noother object than to inform others suffering as did my little girl of the wonderful virtues of this resort.

Mr. B. F. Brown: Dea Sir—This certi-

Jas. F. Jackson.

Mr. B. F. Brown: Dea Sir—This certifies that during last May I was stricken with severe nervous prostration, was confined to my room for three months, and to my bed for the greater part of the time. About the 20th of August I went to the "Hillman Shaft" (Electric Resort,) and after spending four days there found that I was completely cured, and have been entirely well ever since then. The cure in my case was a great wonder to me and my friends, and I am a strong believer in the virtues of the place.

B. F. BROWN, Manager.

Major Dalton was in trouble. He had been detailed and sent to one of the largest inland cities in the confederacy to superintend the manufacture of bombs and torpedoes.

Everything moved along satisfactorily until the chemist connected with the works made a reckless experiment, one day, and blew hum-self up. The force of the explosion was so great that not a piece of the unfortunate man could be found. "I wouldn't have minded it so much," said the major to his friend, the provost marshal, "if the fellow hadn't carried off a lot of valuable papers with him. He knew lots of chemical secrets, and he had his formulas written out, and they were in his pocket when he left."

"You might advertise," suggested the pro-

"Good idea," replied the major, "I'll do it." The next morning the city papers contained a short advertisement, stating that a first-class chemist could secure employment with a good salary at the government works. At that time there were very few idle chemists in the confederacy, and after waiting several days the major began to think that he would have to send to Richmond for a man. One night, when he was alone in his office, menced a letter to the secretary of war. He had just penned a request for the immediate detail of an experienced expert, when he became conscious of the presence of another person in the room.

"I didn't see him, and I didn't hear him," said the major afterwards, "but I could feel my flesh crawl, and I knew that something was up."

The major wheeled around in his chair and saw a man standing just inside the door. The stranger was tall and thin, and his black suit contrasted strangely with his pale face and

Major Dalton noted these points. In addition to his black attire, the man's hair and eyes were of the same sombre shade. He even wore a black watch chain, a pair of black-rimmed eye-glasses, and a black seal ring.

The officer gave a sharp look at his visitor's face, but its dead whiteness was as expressionless as a mask.

"Ahem!" ejaculated the major,
"I must introduce myself," said the stranger stepping forward, "My name is Pellico. I am nist, and I am familiar with the manufacture of explosives. I saw your advertise-ment and decided to offer my services." He spoke rapidly, in a musical voice, with a slight foreign accent. 'You are not an American," said the major. "Italian," briefly responded the other, "I belong to a family of famous chemists, and we have served nearly every government in Just then the major remembered that he had a sentry stationed in front of the office.

"Confounded it, sir!" he broke out angrily,

"how did you get in?"

"I beg your pardon," answered Pello, courteously. "When your office was pointed out to me I walked in." "But the sentry, the guard?"

"Oh, the soldier—I simply passed him by."
"You ran the risk of getting shot," growled "Not at all, there was no danger," was the quiet reply.

Pellico's manner impressed the officer, and he asked his visitor for his credentials.

The man in black produced a letter of recommendation from a Spanish officer of high rank in Cuba. "So you have not been long in this country?" remarked the confederate:

"Ten days. I slipped through the blockaders, landed in Florida, and then came

Further conversation did not cause him to say anything that was inconsistent with his first account of himself. In the course of half an hour Major Dalton was ready to admit that he was in the presence of man of superior intellect, and one who doubtless was master of his profession.

The interview resulted in the engagement of Pellico, and on the following morning he went m the very outset the man in black gave perfect satisfaction, but he made no friends. The men called him "Mr. Midnight," and the officers quietly agreed among themselves that he was a mystery, very useful, no doubt, but a

It did not take long to make the discovery that the Italian's bombs and torpedoes were the best that had ever been made. One night Pellico paid another visit to the office of Major Dalton.

"Major," said he, after some talk about powder, gun cotton, Greek fire and other mat-ters, "the main object of our explosives is to destroy the enemy?"

"Um, well yes, to a certain extent," replied the gallant confederate.
"What do you think then of a bomb that is capable of doing a hundred fold more damage than any now in use?"

"It would be a big thing." Well," continued Pellico, "I have invented it. I have a chemical compound that can be projected into the enemy's lines through the medium of a shell, and when the shell bursts a deadly vapor spreads over an area of a hundred yards killing every living thing. One shell is capable of killing an entire regiment."

"Why, my God, man," exclaimed the najor, "that would be murder!" "And what is war?" asked Pellico in his low, soft voice.

The subject did not drop there. The man in black had so much to say about his invention that the major found himself deeply in-

"This little thing," said Pellice, exhibiting something that looked like a pill covered with tin foil, "would kill a house full of people." "It is hard to believe."

"Let me convince you," urged the chemist "If you will walk a square with me I will show

"If you will wark a square with me I will show you something."

The major objected, but the Italian assured him that his intended victims were several hogs in the rear of the office.

When they reached the place they found the hogs quietly snoozing in a fence corner.

They then retired fifty yards or so, and Pellico blew his little pill through a hollow

"Wait three minutes," he said.

At the expiration of the time the two approached the fence corner.

proached the fence corner.

Four large hogs lay stretched out on the ground. It required only a glance to see that they were all dead.

"Now," said the chemist as they walked. away, "this experiment is on a very small scale, but you can form an idea from what you have seen."

"It is autonishing." commented the major.

"Nothing to what I have done," said the man in black. "In Cuba I took a sling and threw a ball of this stuff as big as my fist into threw a ball of this scan as oig as my fist into a village. The next morning it was found that all the inhabitants, some three or four hundred, were dead. People outside supposed that it was some mysterious epidemic, but it

Major Dalton drew himself aloof from his companion.
"And you killed those innocent people for

"And you kneed chose innocent people for nothing?" he asked indignantly. "In the interests of science, my dear major. Besides they were native Cubans. I would not have treated genuine Spaniards that

The major pulled his mustache and walked on in silence for a few minutes.
"What do you propose?" he asked, after "My scheme is a big one," replied Pellico. "A few little pellets thrown into Libby, Salis bury and Andersonville will rid us of all the yankee prisoners, and save our government no end of expense. Then we must use my inven-tion in the field. The armies of Sherman and Grant will melt away before it, and a few hundred such projectiles fired from long range guns into New York will turn that metropolis into a city of the dead. What do you say?"

"Helle, corporal, come here!" yelled the Several soldiers ran to the spot in a hurry. "Seize him!" shouted the officer, "and take him to the guard house. He is an enemy, a murderer, the devil himself, I believe. But, hold on—search him."

"Only some papers and these pills," said the

"I'll take them," said the major. "Now bustle him off to the guard house." The major walked with rapid strides to the office of the commander of the post. The provost marshal was summoned as a party to the conference, and other officers were also called

The council lasted until a very late hour. Never in their whole military experience had the officers ever been confronted with so serious a problem.

When they dispersed the sentinel outside heard one of them say: "He is a monster, an enemy to the whole human race. We cannot accept his aid, and if we let him go he may at any time turn against us and against our people."

"There is but one thing to do," said the The next morning the man in black was found dead on the floor of the guard house, By his side lay a shred of tin foil.

"I searched him," said the corporal, "and took all those shiny pills away from him. How did that get there, I wonder, and what in the mischief is it anyhow?" The commander of the post, the provost marshal and Major Dalton showed little surprise when they heard of Pellico's death. The corporal, however, heard the provost marshal speaking in an undertone to the major. 'What did you do with the other pellets?' "I rode out to the river and threw them in,"

answered the major.

"All right," responded the marshal. "This has been a strange piece of business from first to last, but I don't think that our consciences will ever hurt us for our part in it."

Long years afterwards a gray-haired confederate veteran mentioned some of the facts of the case to a circle of interested listeners. "And who was Pellico?" some one asked.
"I have always thought that he was the devil," replied the veteran.

"Did the major really kill him?" inquired a

The veteran shut one eye and twisted his "We had better not talk about that," he said, "but you may rest assured that if he did kill the wretch he has never regretted it."

The Highway of Nations, The broad Atlantic, is ever a stormy thorough-fare. Yet blow the winds ever so fiercely, and ride the waves ever so loftily, seamen must man the good ships, tourists will brave the passage, and commercial travelers and buyers must visit the centers of foreign trade and manufacture. That atrocious malady, sea-sickness, together with colicky pains and much inward uneasiness is often endured when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters would have fortified the voyagers against them. Sea captains, and in fact all old salts and veteran captains, and in fact all old saits and veteran travelers are acquainted with the pretective value of this estimable preventive and remedy, and are rarely unprovided with it. Emigrants to the far west should use it as a safeguard against malaria. Of the almost human intelligence of crows, there can be no doubt. Innumerable authenticated incidents prove this, and it conviction is needed, follow the coast clamdiggers half a day upon the shores. Watching his chance, the crow will pounce upon it, rise to a great height, let it fall upon the rocks, and, instantly descending, wrench apart the scattered shell, devour its coveted contents with many croakings and chucklings over its own cany wisdom and success. I am also convinced that crows possess still more remarkable characteristics. I fully believe that some sort of civil and penal codes exist among their communities; that in some sort of way they preserve record of misdoings; and that, while they may have no system of rewards, their sociology comprehends direst punishment to offenders from the crow standard of ethics. At Crow's Neck, near Trescott, Maine, there exists a sort of crow metropolis. Vast multitudes of crows gather here apparently to adjust their civic affairs. One day last September, when passing along a wooded road skirting a large cornfield, the sky suddenly became blackened with crows, which, after an appalling whirling, shricking and cawing, rose high above the surrounding forest, and then, swiftly descending, formed a hollow circle in the center of the field, the black mass gleaming like tremendous dark waters touched by moonlight in some vast pool. Then from the inner edge of the circle a select few arranged themselves in stately groups in the center. Court being onened two culprit crows were brought before the bar. Under guard they stood there silently with hang-dog heads andguilty looks. Their certain trial lasted nearly half an hour, and all the wrangling of a human court was indulged in; sentence was pronounced, and suddenly half a dozen powerful crow executioners ponneed upon the unresisting victims and beat them to death with their beaks, wings and claws. Approval by the crow public was manifested by amazing acclamations; and vast crowds of crows, whirling and swirling from air to earth in an ecstacy of approbation, scatted to the winds nearly every ve

"Well," said the lady who had first entered, "tell her if it isn't true. She thinks my hair was always as long and soft as now and I cannot convince her of the contrary." Miss Sutherland smiled and said to the other, "You should have seen your friend a year ago." "Indeed she should," laughed the subject of these remarks. "You know, my dear (turning to her companion), that I was dreadfully ill with erysip-las summer before last and that my half fell out until there was very little left to fail. I was in despair for there were no signs of its coming back again, until providentially I learned of the restoratives of these Seven Sutherland Sisters." "Yes," interrupted Miss Naomi Sutherland, "this lady came to us practically baid. She has user our hair-grower and scalp-cleaner and now you can see for yourself how luxuriant her tro-ses are."

"Why, my dear," said the other lady, "it seems incredible that any one can have such beautiful hair as yours except as a natural growth."

"But that's just it," broke in Miss Sutherland, Showing her pearly teeth as she spoke, "our hair-grower and scalp-cleaner make thehair grow naturally. That is how our hair has grown, and that is the way every person's hair grows who uses our remedies."

the way every person's hair grows who uses our remedies."

The success that the Seven Sutherland Sisters are meeting with both here and in Philadelphia, where they have recently opened a branch store, in the sale of their wonderful hair preparation and restorer, is simply phenomenal. It would require columns of space to publish the unsolicited testimonials which they receive from grateful people every week, and many complimentary letters are also received from the druggists throughout the country who handle their preparations. A few specimens of these communications, selected at random from a drawer full will be found below. Any one who is still skeptical in regard to the worth of the Seven Sutherland Sisters' hair-grower and scalp-cleaner should write to the headquarters, at 18 West Fourteenth street, for proofs of what it will do. These proofs will be promptly furnished to anybody in the shape of testimonials and indorsements which cannot be gainsayed. The hair-grower is securely packed and shipped to any address for 1s a bottle or six bottles for 5s. Scalp-cleaner 50c per package.

Fears were entertained by our commanders that the enemy would attempt to land troops and come in upon us at that point, hence picket duty was very heavy; and the region where this arduous duty was to be performed was dismal and uninviting in the extreme.

Canebrakes, underbrush, mud and marsh, frogs, owls and mosquitoes were some of the more prominent productions of the locality; and a fellow was almost afraid to open his mouth for fear a ten-horse chill would slip in

"Boys," he commenced, after shoving a fresh quid of "stingy-green" between his grinders, "I b'lieve I'll tell you one uv my scrapes when I lived in Tallerdigzy county, Alabama. Ever thar?" he stopped to ask. Each one of us was forced to answer nega

Sisters, whose marvellous tresses have become the wonder of the world, could be seen through the plate-glass windows. The first lady hurried up the steps and entered the famous establishment of the steps and entered the famous establishment of the steps and the other slowly followed. By the time the second lady had entered she found her friend in earnest conversation with Miss Naomi Sutherland, whose portrait appears in this column. "Well," said the lady who had first entered, "tell her if it isn't true. She thlinks my hair was always as long and soft as now and I cannot convince her of the contrary." Miss Sutherland smiled and said to the other, "You should have seen your friend a year ago." "Indeed she should," laughed the subject of these remarks. "You know, my dear (turning to her companion), that I was dreadfully sli with erystyles summer before last and that my half fell out until there was very little left to fall. I was in despair for there were no signs of its coming back again until providentially I learned of the restoratives of these Seven Sutherland Sisters." "Yes," interrupted Miss Naomi Sutherland, "this lady came to us practically bald. She has used our hair-grower and scalp-cleaner and now you can see for yourself how luxuriant her tre-sees are." "Why, my dear," said the other lady, "itseems incredible that any one can have such beautiful hair as y are accept as a natural growth." "But that's just it," broke in Miss Sutherland, showing her pearly tech as she spoke, "our hair-grower and scalp-cleaner make thehair grow naturally. That is how our hair has grown, and that is the way every person's hair grows who uses our remedies." "Moses be blessed for that!" he went on. "I hope yer never will be, fer uv all the dad-busted countries this side uv the moon, that sartinly gits away with the puddin'.

the success that the Seven Sutherland Sisters are ting with both here and in Philadelphia, where have recently opened a branch store, in the sale heir wonderful hair preparation and restorer, is ply phenomenal. It would require columns of the topublish the unsolicited testimonials which receive from grateful people every week, and my complimentary letters are also received from cruggists throughout the country who handle repreparations. A few specimens of these committentors, selected at random from a drawer full, be found below. Any one who is still skeptical gard to the worth of the Seven Sutherland Sishair grower and scalp-cleaner should write to headquarters, at 18 West Fourteenth street, for so of what it will do. These proofs will be aptly furnished to anybody in the shape of tesnials and indorsements which cannot be gaind. The hair-grower is securely packed and ped to any address for $1$ a bottle or six bottles. Scalp-cleaner 50c per package. The following letters, published just as read through the mail, will be found specimens of communications daily received by the Seven cribud Sisters. WAS IT SUICIDE?

From the Texas Siftings. It was an old man. It—for it was dead. He had been found in an old lumber yard, lying face upward and eyes open, as if he had at last seen something in the stars friendly to him.

On examination, it was found that the veins at his wrists had been cut and he had bled to death. A dull old pen-knife, with blood on the blade, lay beside him. Poor old man! de nied even the luxury of suicide. Morphine, chloroform, quick poison, the pitiful emptiness of his pockets showed he was not able to buy. He had to get out of the world as he could. A horrible sawing at the wrists with an old knife!

But was it suicide? It so appeared by the evidence; but it was not. He never killed himself. Some woman killed him. The fine contour of features, the shapely forehead, in its full halo of silver hair, the pleasing and example and the language of the silver hair, the pleasing and example and the language has the silver hair the pleasing and example the silver hair the silver hair the property and the silver hair the property hair the contour of features, the shapely forehead, in its full halo of silver hair, the pleasing and expressive mouth, all proved this.

Some woman killed the old man. And it was a woman that had been very near to him, too. It was his mother, or sister, or sweetheart, or wife, or daughter.

Perhaps it was his dear old mother. She would have given her heart's blood for him. She would have tramped with sore and bleeding feet the whole world over to find him and bring him home. He was her beautiful, wayward boy who had torn himself from her when she was reproving him for some wrong with motherly tears and heartbreak, and had never let himself be heard of by her again. Years had she looked for his return, had written everywhere for tidings of him, hoped for him, longed for him, prayed for him, and at last sickened and died for him. He was on his way home to beg her forgiveness when he heard of her death. He turned back soulsmitten and wandered over the earth. She pursued him everywhere, day and night. When hungry and sick, and friendless and aimless, he turned aside into this old lumberyard last night, she followed him there. There was nobody else with him. No, it was not suicide.

yard last night, she followed him there. There was nobody else with him. No, it was not suicide.

Or possibly the woman that was last with him was his sister. Because we have seen that there must have been some woman in it when a man like this resolved to die. This was a man whom a sister should have loved. But the beautiful sister whom he worshipped, at that age when all women are angels, became a fallen angel. When she fell, and he could not lift her up or win her back, no woman ever found any place in his heart again. And a man's life without a woman's love in it, not being worth saving, it is scarcely suicide to throw away. But this may be the falsest of all interpretations of the drama of a man's life whose tragic closing scene here on this squalid stage had but a single actor and no other audience than the stars. Who knows but the old man may have been a lover. Young, and handsome, and talented, he was proud and poor. The woman who thought she loved him, and whom he adored, was fashionable and therefore purchasable. Her price was an establishment with a husband thrown in. The ideal, impractical young man had nothing but his heart to stake on the game of woman's love, and he lost. And when he lost his heart he lost his life. He only finished dying last night. The woman had left little for suicide to do.

But no; the woman resisted her rich family and fashionable friends and became his wife. She admired him and expected great things of him. He would win fame and gain fortune, and so justify her. He did neither. She grew indifferent to him, and he, therefore, grew indifferent erance and with protestations of mere duty. His heart hungered for her love, and he could not live on those husks of it that she threw to

He turned to his daughter for solace; but the daughter, inheriting a society woman's heart, made still more selish by the false education wallered it erround 'bout an hour, an'then sot down on his tail an' cried like somebody hed stepped on his corn. But he didn'ttackle that steak agin.

"I dried the hide uv that ole cow and made shovel plows out uv it—"

"Uncle—!"

"I see some uv you fellers is gwine ter git mortally wounded 'fore I git through. Yer wanted a story. I'm gwine ter tell it-er bust," he went on.

"Wall, I seed that wouldn't do; we hed ter hev meat er be berried, so one night I tuck ole Yelp (my dog), my ole rifle, an' ax an' started. I was determined ter hev meat if I hed ter kill somebody's hoss.

"It war a norful cold night, an' arter trampin' 'round an hour er so, an' startin' no game, I bergun ter feel like freezin', so I stopped on the bank uv the creek an' built a rousin' fire.

"Arter gittin' good warm, I told ole Yelp we'd better try an' find whar we lived, fer it bergun ter look like ef thar ever was any game in that country it hed starved; so we shoved out.

"I' edn't gone more'n a milo when I cum to ernuther creek. This kinder 'stonished me for I wasn't erquainted with but one creek in my settlement. However, I crossed on a log and kep' a diggin', I couldn't hear nuthin' from edit the majority. She criticized him of maternal indulgence, went with the majority against him. em," resumed Plunkett, "what done the fight-ing and er right smart running too, but they had to run, and after the old soldiers of Johnston's army seed them fellows fight they didn't have no more to say erbout Joe Brown's militia, for thar was many er old soldier that told me then, and they've told me since, that the way that First Georgia regiment of state troops fought had never been beat, and I don't believe it ever will be. They were cut up believe it ever will be. They were cut up mighty bad, and as they run back er piece and formed, and their colonel was standing with his sword in his hand waiting for orders ter try it ergin, I could see the tears run down his cheeks as he looked and seed how his regiment had been tore to pieces, and an old soldier what was erlong with me, said: 'I bet you that's er brave man and er kind officer;' and he was, fer before the day was over he acted so valiant-of their laurels and it's er d-n lie! d-n lie! | York, and, as you know, have been here ever faster than er cat can wink her eye."

"Well," returned Plunkett, "I would never do anything to detract from the brave fellows who fought, dead or living. I love them; it's my greatest pleasure to remember their brave deeds, but there's another side that is never my greatest pleasure to remember their brave deeds, but there's another side that is never appreciated in times of peace and that is never considered under the patriotic enthusiasm that precedes all wars. In the good work of zealous care to hand down to future generations the untarnished record of our heroes, send as a companion thereto the truth verified that war's er bad, bad thing."

UNDER THE MAGNOLIAS

By Genie Orchard

"What a lovely creature!"
My friend Will Hartley and I were walking at a brisk pace down Fifth avenue one after-noon in January, when the subject of his involuntary exclamation passed, and as she looked at me, blushed and bowed. I felt the blood surge over my face and my heart beat fast. Yes, my friend was right. She was, indeed, lovely. A woman young and beautiful reclining among her furs in a silver mounted sleigh, drawn by two spirited black ponies, that dashed through the clear, crisp air, to the music of a hundred silver bells.

"She knows you," cried my companion.
"Surely I have never seen her before. She looked like some brilliant cacti flower, blooming amid banks of snow. Tell me, do you know her?"

"Yes, Will, I know her well, and would to God I'd never known her. Yes, my dear boy, that beautiful woman who dashed past us holds the key to my heart, my life and my destiny; but 'tis useless to think of it, for 'tis all over,' "But why is it you have never told me of her before?" said my companion, drawing nearer to me, and putting his arm in mine. "Have we been as brothers all these years, and you have drawn the curtain of silence over the most sacred chambers of your life, and I have trusted you so deeply, my friend?"

"Yes, that is true," said I, "but it is a stab to my heart to mention her name. Come to my room tonight, and you shall know all. Until then, adien!" and we parted. Will Hartley, with a light step and a lighter heart, went his way, and I, Alex. Huntley, with a pain in my heart, went my way.

my heart, went my way.
"You have heard me speak a thousand times of my dear old home down in South Carolina," he said, as according to ap point-Carolina," he said, as according to ap pointment, we met in my room that evening.

"It was then I first knew Vista Ashley—knew her from the day she was an infant, crowing in her nurse's arms. Her home was adjoining mine. It was a princely place, and the family was the proudest and the oldest in the land. In fancy I now see the great brown house, almost enveloped in a wilderness of magnolia and mock orange trees—great, tall giant trees, towering in the light with a million fragrant blossoms, like censors bearing all the spices of India in their creamy cups. All the perfume of those flowers. The faint memory seems to intoxicate my senses even now. Emerging from the wilderness of azalias and oleanders, there was the avenue of grand memory seems to intoxicate my senses even now. Emerging from the wilderness of azalias and oleanders, there was the avenue of grand old oaks that led to the river's brink—patriarchs all bearded in moss and jassamine—that the Asheleys had planted nearly a century ago. And the sunshine—our sunshine that beggars words and laughs at painters. Amid all this beauty, this verdure, this boundless, delicious, heavenly light, I first saw Vista and loved her. But yesterday it seems I saw her playing beneath the magnolia shade, with her old nurse, whose face shone like polished ebony beneath her turban of crimson and green, and I used to tease her and toss her into the air until her curls would almost tangle in the vines above. She was a pretty, wayward thing, even then she formed the one poem of my life, the one sweet gleam of leisure, rest and fancy that crept into my every-day life.

As the years stole on we were continually associated together. I helped her with her studies and tangth her to ride and drive. And how proud I was to watch her sit a racer, and plunge over ditches and fences, without fear. She would sit as erect as an Indian, with her little head thrown back, and her hair tossing about her. But one April day I left her. The booming guns at old Sumter proclaimed the need of all loyal hearts and hands, and I marched to the front and did my part. You know the rest. How after four years of bloodshed and desolation, I returned home to find my slaves emancipated, my estates dissipated. I was a poor man and alone in my poverty, for my father had died during my absence, and I was truly desolate. I again met Vista Ashely. The years had made her infinitely more beautiful. I can no more describe her than.

"So you found her, Alex?" interposed Will "So you found her, Alex?" interposed Will Hartley, deeply interested in my recital.

"Yes, I found her, and that is the saddest part of all. One evening, near dark, my business carried me to one of the mest squalid quarters of the city, I was walking along rapidly when I noticed in front of me a woman emerge from a side street and walk hurriedly before me. Only a woman, like hundreds we see in the haunts of the poor in large cities. But there was something about the figure and walk that startled me. Her clothes were thin, even ragged, yet there was a regal grace and bearing that even the tatters of pennry could not conceal. In an instant I was beside her. "My God, Vista," was all I could utter, and grasping her arm I scanned her face, uncertain if it was but the spirit of the woman I adored beside me.

"Ves extern" at last. I have found you." I

"Yes, at last! at last I have found you," I

"Yes, at last! at last I have found you," I cried.

"Alex Huntley"—she almost moaned the words—"how came you here?" and her face became deathlike in its pallor.

"Come with me, Vista," I cried. "Come now; this is no place for yeu. Let me be your brother—your friend—only leave this haunt of poverty and come with me."

"You know not what you ask, Alex," she answered, drawing away. "Pray leave me and forget that you have seen me. Only remember me as you saw me last—so long ago—down in our own sweet southland. Your world is no longer my world. A barrier lies between us. I am dead to the past; dead to the home of my fathers. Alex Huntley, forget me," and, drawing her arm from my grasp, she would have been lost in the current of humanity surging past. I caught her hand, so thin and cold, and implored her to let me shield her. "Vista, I have loved you always. Come, be my wife—my queen—my goddess. We will return to the old home; we will forget the past: only follow me now,"

A weary, death-like look stole over her face. "God bless you, Alex, for all you ask. A barrier is between us. Pity me, but leave me."

"There is but one barrier that has power to separate us, Vista. God forbid that you are in a haunt of vice as well as one of poverty."

A great crimson wave surged over her face and her eyes flashed like those of an enraged tigress. Drawing back, with the hauteur of a queen, she almost hissed the words:

"Alex Huntley, do you forget that I am a daughter of the Asheleys, and a Carolinian? I have not forgotten it, although I starve and suffer! I will never forget my name and the home of my fathers! I will die in your river first—remember that! Furewell! Do not seek me."

And, gathering her threadbare shawl about her, she passed up a flight of stairs into a ten-first—remember that? Farewell? Do not seek me."

And, gathering her threadbare shawl about her, she passed up a flight of stairs into a tenament house. It was my impulse to follow her, but I dared not.

The next day I returned to the house determined to persuade her to accept my assistance. Imagine my anguish when I was told by an inmate of the same house that at dawn of day Vista had gone, no one knew where. I returned to the duties of my life, with a stone where my heart had been. I instinctively felt that Vista had gone beyond my help—had gone to find relief in death.

Two years passed. I cherished only a sad, sweet memory of the woman I loved without one flicker of hope. One evening I strolled alone into the Academy of Design loan exhibition of paintings. A large crowd was gathered around a canvas, and exclamations of administrations and the strength of the same of bition of pantings. A large crowd was gathered around a canvas, and exclamations of admiration were heard. Later in the evening I pressed my way to the picture. There before me was a perfect likeness of Vista Asheley, just as I had seen her last when in the full flush of her womanly magnificence. She represented the starry-eyed Egyptian queen, Cleepatra. Gorgeously beautiful, she was reclining beneath a canopy of crimson and gold. The perfect contour of her figure was enveloped in a cloud of rose tissue, and the billows of dusky hair were partly bound in clusters of jewels. At her breast she held the asp with venomed tooth. I was dazed, transfixed, the blood seemed to leap through my veins. Looking at me with half smilling mouth and dark, languid eyes wasly ista Asheley, and yet when I put out my arms to her, I touched but a painted shadow, on a piece of canvas. I was speechless, motionless. I knew not how long I stood until the janitor informed me that he was closing the doors and extinguishing the lights. Before leaving the place, however, I obtained the address of the artist who had painted the picture. The following day I visited the studio of Rossi, for he it was that painted it. He was pleased and willing to give me all the information he posessed regarding his lovely model. He told me how he had found her in abject poverty; that, though clothed in threadbare garments, he recognized the perfect figure and the soft, tender, southern beauty of the face; and how he persuaded her to become his model; and that to her he owed his reputation, while to him she owed her life of ease and luxury. It was through one of his pictures of her that she had won a husband of rank and fortune, who worshipped her. He had seen her face painted in a cloud of azure and sunlight. Immediately he bought it and idolized the image in a vague, poetic way, until by chance he met in his studio the original. The result was a speedy marriage.

"Yes," said the artist, "that is a romance enual to any I have ever read. Only vester-

"Yes," said the artist, "that is a romance equal to any I have ever read. Only yesterday she was to see me, radiant in lace and jewels which an empress might well envy, while only a few months ago she wore the tatters and threadbare garments that a beggar would discard."

I thanked him and went out of his studio into the warm morning light with a heart of

I thanked him and went out of his studio into the warm morning light with a heart of ashes, all life, all hope consumed.

Yes, once I saw her, only for a moment. I caught her jeweled hand and exclaimed, "Vista, why did you not come to me when I found you?"

"Vista, why did you not come to me when I found you?" said she, "I longed to heed your entreaties, and follow you, but the barrier that separated usl was a man of infamy who took me from my home and basely deserted me. He was them alive, and he was my husband." "Are you happy, Vista?" I asked.

She looked up into my face, and the lustre of her eyes was dim as she said: "Alex, happiness is like the flowers of the aloes; it blooms but once. Love and happiness bloomed for me under the shade, of the magnolias and the orange but never since."

I knew what she meant, and so it was we parted.

Now, Will, my story is told. I have given you the key to the most sacred recesses of my life and my soul. Good-right, my friend; I would be alone now.

Will Hartly understood what pain it had cost me to unlock the vault of the past. Tears were in his eyes as he pressed my hand and left me.

Brand New Idea Just Put in at Tyner's Drug

Store.

There are some people who are nothing unless original. Mr. C. O. Tyner is one of these, and he has just made a "hit" on the night bell system that will make Cap Joyner and his fire laddies ashamed of themselves. The old method of ringing at a drug store bell on a cold night has been a nuisance for a long time, but, Mr. Tyner, by a kind of drug store magic way of getting at things, put his head to work, and has succeeded in "getting there." Now, when a man goes up to Tyner's, after closing hours, he simply pushes a little electric button, which is plainly visible and marked "Night Call." The next instant he hears the return call right over his head, and knows that the clerk is coming. The interesting part of the arrangement, however, is yet to be told. The clerk doesn't have to come slowly down a long statiway from two or three flights above—not he. He has a slick lron pole that comes up through the floor at his bedside, and as soon as he hears the bell at his ear, he touches a button, gives the return call, then slides down the pole in a jiffy. By the time he is at the bottom, twenty feet or less, he is wide-awake, the man at the door has not waited thirty seconds and the prescription is made up in one-fourth the time ordinarily required. The firemen have not as yet gotten out an injunction, but Mr. Tyner says he never saw anything work better. He is to be congratulated on his progressive tideas.

LORD & THOMAS,

A "SLICK" TRICK. Brand New Idea Just Put in at Tyner's Drug

Brand New Idea Just Put in at Tyner's Drug

Store.

There are some people who are nothing unless original. Mr. C. O. Tyner is one of these, and he has just made a "hit" on the night bell system that will make Cap-Joyner and his fire laddies ashamed of themselves. The old method of ringing at a drug store bell on a cold night has been a nuisance for a long time, but, Mr. Tyner, by a kind of drug store magic way of getting at things, put his head to work, and has succeeded in "getting kere."
Now, when a man goes up to Tyner's, after closing hours, he simply pushes a little electric button, which is plainly visible and marked "Night Call."
The next instant he hears the return call right over his head, and knows that the clerk is coming. The interesting part of the arrangement, however, is yet to be told. The clerk doesn't have to come slowly down a long stairway from two or three flights above —not he. He has a slick iron pole that comes up through the floor at his bedside, and as soon as he hears the bell at his ear, he touches a button, gives the return call, then slides down the pole in a jiffy.
By the time he is at the bottom, twenty feet or less,
he is wide-awake, the man at the door has not waited thirty seconds and the prescription is made up in one-fourth the time ordinarily required. The firemen have not as yet gotten out an injunction, but Mr. Tyner says he never saw anything work better. He is to be congratulated on his progressive ideas.

THOSE WHO WISH A SEWING MACHINE embodying all the results of inventive skill and constructed to do the best service for a lifetime, should not fail to examine the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson, which have just been placed to the front by that company. For manufacturing or for family use these machines are pronounced by those most competent to know, as unapproached in excellence by any other. In these machines the rotary motion principle—the true mechanical principle for sewing machines—is carried to the utmost practicable extent, every part being made to rotate that does not absolutely require some other mode of motion. The result is little or no friction or noise and absolutely no risk to a lady's health in using them. Call at 71 Whitehall street and examine these machines.

today was dull as usual, but it showed more decided weakness than on any previous day this week and the price declined almost throughout the session. There was very little life in the list at first, but the There was very little life in the list at first, but the feeling was bearish. London had some selling orders in its specialities, and traders joined in the selling on a report of strike on the Chicago, Baltimore and Quincy, though for some time there was not an influential room trader present in the board. Bear operators, however, gave out some heavy selling orders later. Northwestern stood the brunt of the attack at first, but was displaced later by Louisville and Nashville and Missouri Pacific, the last mentioned teing the only stock whose extreme fluctuation during the day extended to 1 per cent. There was some little buying for arbitrage account toward the close, but it did no more than to steady the list in some directions. The close was dull, but heavy at the lowest price of the day; the day's business amounted to only 63,000 shares; everything is lower; Louisville and Nashville lost 1½ per cent; Colorado Coal and Richmond and West Point preferred 1 per cent each, and the rest fractional amounts.

Investment business has been quiet since our last report, though prices have not receded in any case so far as we can learn; on the other hand, there have been davances in some securities, notably Capital City bank stock. Of this stock there have been free offerings along through the past two or three months, but within the last ten days nearly all the floating stock has been absorbed by investors, and today there is but little to be had at any price, and none offering under par. The stock is cheap at anywhere near present prices, because it is almost certain that at least 8 per cent per annum dividends will be paid. The bank is doing well in earnings, and the showing of deposits for the short time it has been open a very creditable one.

NEW YORK, February 25—Hubbard, Price & Co-, in their circular today, say: The better feeling brought about yesterday by the absorption of notices, continued today, and, with the buying of contracts. to close the accounts of Messrs, C. L. Greene & Co, under the rules, advanced prices at the opening, and still! further during the forencon. Liverpool was reported steady with buyers at the advance. Prices here on the call showed an improvement of 2@3 points, and the increasing faith in the buil movement, caused by the reaction yesterday, brought orders from the outside which were, to some extent, interrupted by a severe storm. Much steadiness resulted, which continued to the close, but apart from this the market was without feature. The volume of business was fair, and the room sentiment leans toward better prices solely on the success of the buil element in advancing prices on notices. The interior movement for the week amounted to 24,000 bales. Decreasing receipts would have agreat effect upon the market. New Orleans estimates receipts for the week 20,000 bales and at all ports 60,000 bales.

market about 2. A decidedly more confident feeling was manifested throughout the day and the closing is steady at Liverpool and here, while quiet at New York, owing to the Saturday half holiday.
The bears didn't issue as many notices as they

Grain and Provisions.

CHICAGO, February 25—[Special.]—The bullish feeling which marked the close of the session on Friday was continued this morning, and trading early was of a very confident character. Liberal export clearances encouraged wheat buyers and export clearances encouraged wheat buyers and the price opened ½c over the close at 80½, and went up to 80½, then came an announcement of a New York failure, the significance of which was not known. May immediately declined to 80½, many holders selling out quickly at a loss. Half an hour later, the market had reached ¼, and May closed at 80½, the highest figure of the day.

Corn opened steady, at last night's prices, but the light receipts and strength in wheat helped May from 51½ opening figure to 51½. from 51%, opening figure, to 51%. The market was nervolls, however, and when a little scare came. May sold off to 51@51½. There was a slight rally from this point, but the receipts for Monday were estimated at 404 cars, and the price of May could not again get above the opening, where it closed.

There was fair active in oats at the outset, but prices kept within a small range, and before the close the market was dull and neglected. May sold at 31% and 31%@31½, closing at 31½. Provisions were slow but strong. Trading was Provisions were slow but strong. Trading was chiefly between local scalpers and fluctuations were small, the range on pork being 12½c., but on lard and short ribs, 5c. Several large operators bought pork early and advanced prices 5c. When they withdrew a weak feeling developed, and a decline of 12½c. followed, but the last sales were at an advance of 7½c., over inside figures. The sales for May ranged at 13,7½@14.10, and closed at 14.05. Lard was neglected. May sold at 7.77½@82½, and closed at 7.80. Short ribs sold sparingly at 7.32½@87½, and closed at 7.35 for May.

Dull Week.

Last week was one of postponemants. Several social entertainments had been announced for offerent evenings, but the terrible weather rendered postponement necessary, in almost every instance. The Martha Washington party, to be given by the young people of the Central Presbyterian church, is being elaborately gotton up and will doubtless be one of the mest enjoyable. The Constitution has printed the full list of chara ters as arranged for last Friday's entertainment. These same people will take part in the performance of the 6th, and there will be a number of additional features.

Tomorrow night Doctor J. P. Armstrong will address the Smillie literary circle. Subject, George Elliott. This is the first of a series of lec-lures to be delivered before this association, and a similed number of friends.

The engagement of Miss Annie Reid to Mr. Walter H. Rhett has been announced. Miss Ried is one of the most attractive young ladies of Georgia, as well as one of the most popular. Mr. Rhett is one of Atlanta's brilliant young lawyers. Both are receiving the hearty congra-many friends.

The newly formed Southside Literary club Barry. After the calls was called to order, and the cause of it e meeting state 1, an election was held for officers and the following were chosen: E. T. Barry, president; C. D. Pinson, vice-president; C. S. Nesbit, secretary; C. W. Strickler, treasurer; J. F. Lovette, Ilbrarian; C. W. Martin, assistant librarian. The success of the annual "Bal Masque"

The success of the annual "Bal Masque" given the children of the Jewish Sabbath-schools of Atlanta, at Concoid a hall on Thursday night last, evidenced Mr. Fol. Benjamin, the president of the school board, an amusement caterer par excellence. How the little ones did enjoy themselves: As early as 7:30 they began to arrive—tiny Harlequins, Columbines, Romeos, princes, and every conceivable character, ancient and modern. The costumes were elegant and the children, for a happy two hours, really lived the characters they assumed. It had really lived the characters they assumed. It had been decided by the committee, with a view to en courage originality, to offer a few prizes for the most elegant and original costumes. The successfu petitors among the girls were Miss Lola Hirsch who assumed Annie Pixley's favorite character of the Deacon's Daughter; Miss Rachel Benjamin as a druggist's messenger boy advertising his employer's medicines, and Miss Lena Witcover as a Rainbow. The boys who captured prizes are deserving of spe-cial mention, as their costumes and impersonation of the characters they adopted were simply perfect, Master Ansel Steinheimer as "Jumbo Hunter" was immense; little six-year-old Sammy Cronheim immene; interest stayed a samp cromein "shined 'em up' in proper style as a "coon" boatch; and Frankie Liebermann made a first-rate living skeleton. The award of prizes was made before the little folks unmasked, to prevent any appearance of partiality; and although there was considerate. able good natured rivalry, the verdict of the con mittee was accepted as entirely just.

THE CONSTITUTION was never brighter than in the person of Miss Rosalie Benjaman, who was a living copy of Georgia's favorite rewspaper. Ferdie Ditler, copy of Georeta's havorite rewspaper. Ferdie Ditier, as a clown, amused the little ones, and Herman Franklin, as "King Cotton," tried to prove "diversified farming" a mistake. At 9:30 the children partook of an elegant supper paragraf or them by the teachers of the Sabbath school. A full list of the little ones taking part in the entertain appeared in these columns.

Invitations are out for the marriage of Mr. Will Jones and Miss Fannie Everett, which occurs next Wednesday evening at Trinity church. Both are well known in Atlanta and the occasion of their wedding will be one of the most brilliant society events of the season.

On Friday evening last there was a pleasant little gathering at the residence of Mr. J. R. Merchant, on Jackson street. Mr. Edward Merchant celebrated his birthday on that day and had in-

Rev. Geo. W. Garner, the efficient and popular pastor of the Baptist church of this place, was married hast Wednesday afternoon, 2d inst at 4 o'clock, to Miss Cherry, an accomplished and attractive young lady of Macon, the ceremony being performed in the First Baptist church by the pastor. Dr. E. W. Warren. Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom, accompanied by Mr. O. M. Houser, who acted as best man on that occasion, boarded the 6:50 train for fort Valley, where they arrived at 8:05. They were met at the cars by Hon. J. M. Gray and wife, who carried the happy couple to their home, where quite a number of our best people were gathered to offer congratulations and best wishes. The bride, although a perfect stranger, did not seem the least embarrased at being presented to so many people, but met each and all with a pleasing, womanly dignity with such perfect self-possession as charmed the whole circle of friends, and won the admiration of all present.

Mr. Garner, although comparatively a stranger, having been in our midst only a few months, yet has worked his way into the respect and love of nis church, and the town generally. This was clearly demonstrated by the reception in question, having been provided and arranged by the members of his flock, with the kind assistance of some of their Methodist friends. At a seasonable hour supper was announced and all repaired to the dining-room. Two large tables were well filled with all the delicacles that could delight the eye, and tempt the appetite of the most factilious. In the middle of each table was an immense pyramid of the most beautiful flowers, which proved a most valuable addition to the complete finish of the seene. There was the greatest abundance of every thing good to eat, and, judging from appearances, we unhesitatingly say that all endoyed the occasion to the fullest extent. We feel that we but echo the opinions of all when we say we were charmed with Mr. Garner's lov About the People. Miss Mittie Jones, after a most delightful visit to plumbus, Ga., has returned home. The social natures of the so inty people of the town, that had been kept dormant so long by protracted religious revivals, revived on last Friday night into greater life than ever. The occasion was a delightful social entertainment, given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hollman. It seemed as though every one present felt good and sweet toward every one else, and each one tried to make every one else

The happiest affair of the week and season was the gathering of the Reading club at Dr. Gordon's hospitable home, last Monday evening. The club is composed of the talent and grace of the city, and as an educational factor is invaluable. Mrs. A. A. Jones read an admirable chapter from "Les Miserables;" Rev. Johnson recited with great force and beauty one of Bayard Taylor's poems, and the worthy president, Mrs. Gordon, read an original paper, which it was unanimot sly resolved should be published. At 10 o'clock in the evening, all were invited into an adjoining room, where a bounteous array of good things were served. The favors were elegant cards, with the photographs of the club's favorite authors thereon. Each member at the next meeting, on March 5th, must have an extract from the author he received. The club will meet at Colonel T. R. Jones's.

Advice to Consumptives.

On the appearance of the first symptoms—as general debility, loss of appetite, pallor, chilly sensations, followed by night sweats and cough—prompt measures for relief should be taken. Consumptien is scrofulous disease of the lungs; therefore use the great anti-scrofula, or blood purifier and strength restorer, Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Superior to cod liver oil as a nutritive, and unsurpassed as a pectoral. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, and kindred affections, it has no equal. Sold by druggists the world over. Mrs. Langtry as Lena Despard. Although it may not at once be apparent to the thousands who nightly witness Mrs. Lang-try in her new role of Lena Despard at the Fifth Avenue theater, it is none the less true that her portrayal of that character is very in-structive, and will do much to call public at-tention to the danger of the now provalent practice of the habitual use of narcotics, such as chloral and opium, to produce sleep and calm the nerves.

This feature of the play is made the mor This feature of the play is made the more noticeable by the palpable absurdity of her representation of the manner in which chloral produces death. Dramatic, like poetic license, is responsible for many idiotic things, and some very silly and untruthful ones, but none more so than the death of Lena Despard as rendered by Mrs. Langtry. An overdose of chloral puts the victim to sleep, this quiet sleep deepening into coma or absolute unconsciousness, in which condition the feeble flame of life dies out. There is no screaming, tumbling, dress-rending or frantic convulsive ac-of life dies out. There is no screaming, tumbling, dress-rending or frantic convulsive action of any kind, such as she shows.

But, presumably, this glaring dramatic blunder will do good by emphasizing the fact of death and fixing in the public mind the terrible dangers of using such narcotics to calm the nerves or produce sleep. The more so at this day when every intelligent man and woman should know that nature herself has given to the world a certain, yet harmless. woman should know that nature herself has given to the world a certain, yet harmless, means for obtaining the same result. Sleeplessness, neuralgia, headache, paralysis, brain and nerve exhaustion, may all be relieved and cured by Dr. Buckland's Essence of Scotch Oats, as any eminent physician will testify. I had the best medical attention, swallowed a fearful lot of drugs, and grew worse from day to day. A friend sent me one-haif bottle of Hunnicutt's Rheumatic Cure. Man Says:

I have been troubled with acute rheumatism most of the time since 1840, and a large portion of the time to so great an extent as to deprive me of attending to my business. It finally got into my left side, hip and leg, and for the last eight or ten years I have been troubled with it in my right shoulder, arm and both feet, so it was nearly all over and through me. I have tried the most extensively advertised remedies in the south; of one I took seven bottles, and of another three, neither of which did me any good. Finally I was persuaded to try Hunni-cutt's Rheumatic Cure. After taking one bot-tle, and before the second was all taken, I began to improve, and before I had taken the sixth bottle I was cured sound and well, and now feel like a new man. I can now walk miles in a day and work outdoors in any kind of weather without the slightest inconvenience. I do not believe your Rheumatic Cure has an equal in the world. I have recommended it to my friends, who have used it and are highly pleased with the result. I do not believe there is a case of acute, inflammatory or chronic rheumatism that your remedy will not cure if taken according to directions and persevered in. I have almost daily calls from persons in quring about the Rheumatic Cure. One old man came into my place of business yesterday and told me that one bottle had done him more good than all the medicine he had ever taken for rheumatism. W. B. WYNNE,

On last Monday I published a card in THE CONSTITUTION, in which I stated that I pledged to show that the charges made against me or rather against the Jacobs Pharmacy company, of which I am the manager, was without any founda-tion in fact, and that the motive which actuated Dr. Schumann was purely a personal one. I now beg leave to submit my evidence and ask at the hands of an impartial public a careful consideration of the same. On Sunday, February 12th, 1888, the following card was published in the ATLANTA CON-

GRAND FRAUD.

I have positive knowledge that Mr. W. A. Taylor possesses indisreputable proof of great fraudulent sophistications and adulterations in drugs, chemicals and medicines being carried on daily in a notorious drug store in this city, and I demand from Mr. Taylor that he should step forward as a man, and make the facts known to the public.

The laws of the state forbids a man, who has not the required knowledge, to acquire a license as a druggist, but if a licensed druggist adulterates undictines and sells them to the public, the public ought to know it, and if such knowledge is withheld from the public, the man who withholds it is just as culpable as the man who withholds it is just as culpable as the man who willfully and fraudulently sells adulterated drugs and medicines to the public.

A card published over the name of Doctor Schumann, in yesterday's Constitution, calls for a word from me. The use of my name in that card is entirely unwarranted. The more so, as Doctor Schumann h d asked permission to make use of it, which I declined to give. Having used my name, Doctor Schumann should certainly not have failed to name the druggist indicated, and not have attempted to cast, through the use of my name, inputation on the entire drug trade of the city, with which my relations are most cordial.

If I have any special information on the subject, under discussion, it was acquired in Dr. Shumann's laboratory, and is as well known to that eminent and able chemist as to myself. As Dr. Schumann is one of the sworn board of state examiners appointed by the governor to pass upon the res; o isblity and licensing druggists, if there be any duty in the matter his certainly ranks that of a private citizen. I have no official and less versonal interest in Dr. Schuman himself is in possession of the information he alleges to be in my possession, and, if he thinks the withholding of it is culpable or its profert a public duty, he can act on his cenvictions. I have already refused to allow him to make me the medium of his personal feeling in this matter, and his publication, made against my consent, and without my knowledge, shall not change my attitude.

Very respectfully. WALTER A, TAYLOR. This is not the first time, that this man has tried to get others to act, as a cats I aw for him and failed, as I shall show in this article, having failed to make get others to act, as a cats paw for him and failed, as I shall show in this article, having failed to make Dr. Taylor his tool, he worries his poor brain for a whole week how to make the attack through some one, and finally he strikes upon the happy thought of having himself interviewed and the result appeared in The Constitution's issue of Sunday morning February 19th, 1888. Let us compare this reported interview with Dr. Schumann's first card of February 12th. In the interview the doctor is reported as saying when a ked by the reporter, how about the rumors afact, concerning grave charges of adulterations of drugs by a druggist of Atlanta. "Yes" says the doctor, "but-this is hardly the time to discuss the subject." Now considering the fact that the doctor had himself interviewed, and his Dr. chi mann's first card, in which he says, "that he eminds from Dr. Walter A. Taylor that he should be proward as a man and make the fact known to be public and further on in the same card he says,

If such knowledge is withheld from the public, the man who withholds it is just as culpable as the man who withholds it is just as culpable as the man who withfully sells adulterated drugs, 'ft.'." How can these two statements be reconciled? Earl, no doubt to the doctor's deep regret, this terrible reporter with his little auger draws from the unwilling yeitim the information, does not have a superformation and while the doctor's tender heart bleeds for the injur; which his information, fored from him. It is a collect will not allow him to follow the natural distate officer will not allow him to follow the natural distate officer will not allow him to follow the natural distates of his kind and generous nature, which prompts him to keep allence. such a violator, nor to buy anything at all from any house that sold to any person who violated this agreement.

Being a staisfied that these prices were excessive, and that it was to my interest and advantage to sell at a less profit, and being a strong believer in the old adage of small profits and quick saies. I notified the association that I no longer desired to remain a member, which notification I regarded as severing my connection with them, and absolved me from my agreement. Dr. Schumann, who was the president of the association, called a special meeting at his office and prepared, and had passed, a resolution declaring me expelled from the association. I paid no attention to this, feeling that I was acting for the best interest of the people who bought these things, as well as for my own. I had printed a lot of handbills, in which I advertised the fact that I had reduced the price of many things, and engaged the services of a boy to distribute these bills. Dr. Schumann, becoming enraged at this, had the boy arrested and I promptly had him released on ball, and again set him to work distributing my bills. Dr. Schumann again had him arrested and I again had him arrested and I again had him released. This action of Dr. Schumann's naturally made me angry and the resul was a personal difficulty between us. I do not care to go into details, many of the readers of this article will remember them, as the papers had a full account of the difficulty. A short while after this, the Georgia State Pharmacuetical association met in this city and Dr. Schumann who had openly and loudly boasted that he would, to use his expressive phrese, "down me," drew up an article which he and his eventseented son in law. Behre, tried to have read befere the association, but could not get any one to do so. Hearing of this I sought the doctor and his darling boy and gave them a strong piece of my milind, and while my language on that occasion may not have been very chaste or choice, they understood me and for a time ceased to persec

the stock in the store such medicines as they might think proper, and have them analyzed. I now invite attention to their cards and the report of Prof. John M. McCandles.

Certificate of Dr. Baird.

63 Whitehall street, Atlanta, February 20, 1888.—
This is to certify that on the 7th instant, in company with Dr. J. P. Logan, Dr. J. M. Gaston and Dr. Henry Bak, at the request of Mr. Joseph Jacobs, druggist, No. 2 Marietta street, I aided in ithe selection of forty (40) samples of the most expensive and of the most commonly used drugs, out of the stock upon his prescription counter, upon the shelves in his front store, and from the original packages stored upstairs. The samples thus obtained, were immediately handed to Mr. John M. McCandless, analytical chemist, of this city.

analytical chemist, of this city. analytical chemist, of this city.

It is proper to add that Mr.

Jacobs, in no wise, influenced, or sought to influence, the selection of these samples. I take pleasure in stating, moreover, that I am well acquainted with Mr. McCandless, and I know from personal experience that he is a capa-ble and conscientious chemist.

JAMES B. BAIRD, M. D. Card of Dr. Durham.

ATLANTA, Ga., February 25th, 1888.-This is to certify that, in company with Drs. J. B. Baird, J. P. Logar, J. M. Gaston and H. Bak, at the request of Mr. Joseph Jacobs, I assisted in the selection of forty samples of drugs, out of the stock of Mr. Jacobs's store, taking them from the shelves, and from the prescription. Jacobs's store, taking them from the sugares, and the prescription case, and out of original packages, Mr. Jacobs having nothing at all to do with our selection. These samples, thus obtained, we at once handed to Mr. John M. McCandless, analytical chemist, of this city. Our choice of samples was out of those articles most generally used in prescriptions, and among them was the most expensive drugs.

Atlanta, Ga., February 20, 1888.—Drs. James B. Baird, J. P. Logan, Henry Bak, W. M. Durham and J. M. Gaston.

Gentlemen:—I beg to submit the following report on a portion of the forty (40) samples of medicine received through you and taken by yourselves from the stock of Mr. Jos. Jacobs's drugstore on the 7th inst. In testing these samples I have followed and expect to follow for the most part the methods given by Fr. Hoffman, analyst of drugs for the state board of health of New York, and also the tests prescribed by the Pharmacopocia (1880).

EXAMINATION.

Sample No. I. Potassium Iodide. This being a somewhat costly chemical, and a very important and much used medicine, I have made a careful quantitative analysis of it. It is in fine white cubical crystals.

Allowing for moisture and slight errors of experiment, It will be seen that this salt is exceedingly pure. The required tests of purity given by the pharmacopocia were also fully met by this sample No. 2. This was another sample of potassium iodide taken from a package in bulk, the first being taken from a bottle on the store-sheives. It responded satisfactorily to the same tests as the sample No. 1. Sample No. 3—potassium bromide. This sample meets the tests of the Pharmacopocia for atkalnity, absence of bromates, sulphates and chlorides. No. 4. sodium bromide. No. 5—calcium bromide. In both of these cases the same tests were applicable as in the case of No. 3, and showed samples of excellent quality. Sample No. 6—Mercuric oxide, or "red precipitate." Following "Hoffman" I find this sample free from ulrates or admixtures.

man" I find this sample free from nirates or admixtures.

Sample No. 7—Sub-carbonate of bismuth. This sample responds to the requirements of the Parmacopocia, dissolves completely in nitric acid with effervescence, is free from lead-shows traces only of sulphates and oblorides, gives a slight reaction for ammonia. On boiling with caustic soda and metalic alumnium, and testing the escaping hydrogen gas with silver nitrate paper, there was no darkening, absence of arsenic, is also free from lime in any form and from organic matter. Sample No. 8, sub-nitrate of bismuth. This sample was subjected to the same test as the above with similar results. It was also tested for admixture of carbonate and found to be free from it. It is of good quality. Sample No. 9, sub-nitrate of bismuth in bulk. This was tested in a similar way to to the above, and found to be of good quality. The other samples will be reported on as completed.

Respectfully submitted, JNo. M. McCANDLESS.

No. 11. Zinc oxide. The sample is of good quality free from the Impurities to be expected, sulphates, chlorides, calcim, magnesim, arsenic, etc.

No. 12. Bi-carbonate of soda. This sample is of excellent quality, requiring exactly the theoretical amount of normal acid to to saturate a weighted excellent quality, requiring exactly the theoretical amount of normal acid to to saturate a weighted quantity.

No 18. Carbonate of sods. This sample is also of good quality, free from more than traces of cholrides and sulphates, from metals and from alumnia.

No. 14. Sodium phosphate. This sample free from carbonates and metals, and yelfds the mercest races of sulphates and chlorides of good quality.

No. 15. Calomel. This sample is of good quality, free from ammoniacal salts, from mercuric chloride and the salts and the sample bears "Merck's" seal, rendering an examination almost unnecessary. However, all the tests of the pharmacopocia were applied with satisfactory results.

No. 17. Hydro-chloriae of cocaine. The United States pharmacopocia has no test for this salt. The next edition of the German Pharmacist will require the following tests: "Concentrated sulphuric acid should dissolve it with some foaming, but without coloration, and no color is yroduced by solution in nitric or hydrochloric acid; and heated on platinum foll should leave no residue." Sample No. 17 satisfies these requirements.

No. 18. Santonin. This sample exhibits with reagents the characteristics described by the authorities, and is free from alkaleds.

No. 19. Oil of cubebs. This sample has a socific gravity of 331, gives a blueish color with chloroform solution of bromine, and red color with alcoholic hydrochloric acid. Tests given by Allen for the gennine oil.

No. 20. Oil of winter-green, This sample has a holic hydrochloric acid. Tests given by Allen for the genuine oil.

No. 20. Oil of winter-green. This sample has a specific gravity of 1.161 and mee's the requirements of the Pharmacopocia.

No. 21. Oil of peppermint. The sample has a specific gravity of .915 and responds satisfactorily to Allen's alcohol test.

The remaining samples will be reported on as completed. Respectfully submitted.

Card of Dr. Fred B. Palmer.

This is to certify that I have been a prescription clerk in the city of Atlant; for twenty-three years, and have occupied that position; in the drug store of Joseph Jacobs since he first commenced the drug business in Atlanta, and since the formalion of the Jacobs Pharmacy company, who succeeded Jaseph Jacobs in the drug business, and of which company the said Joseph Jacobs is manager, I have been the prescription clerk, I scleamly declare on my word and honor that during my entire connection with the said Joseph Jacobs, and the Jacobs Pharmacy company, I have not known them, or either of them, to sell or use adulterated drugs or medicine of this character could not have been used without my knowledge. Is it necessary for me to say to the public of Atlanta whom I have served so long that I would not be guilty of compounding adulterated drugs, by which the lives of men, women and children might be endangered? I think not; and, yet, if Dr. Schumann is to be believed, this is a fact, for these adulterated drugs could not have been used without my knowledge. My reputation as a druggist, I

To Whom It May Concern : Having served in th capacity of prescription clerk at Jacobs' Pharmacy for the past eighteen months, I wish to say this: I have never within my kn.wiedge compounded a prescription of any other than pure and legitimate drugs.

Very respectfully,

WM. B. FREEMAN.

ATLANTA, Ga., February 21.-Dr. Jos. Ja ATLANTA, (A., February 21.—Dr. Jos. Jacobs: Dear Sir—In reply to your favor I beg to say that during the years 1834 and 1885 I had entire charge of the manufacturing department of your establishment and can conscientiously state that pure drugs only were used in that department. Truly yours, HERMAN BENJAMIN.

yours,

In conclusion, I desire to say that I have much more evidence, and a number of cards from the best and most prominent physicians in the city. This article is already so long that I will not publish them just now, but will cheerfully show them to any one who may desire to see them. My store is open to any one, for examination of any and all drugs therein, and will always be so, as long as I remain to charge. Will Dr. Schumann say as much for his in charge. Will Dr. Schumann say as much for his drug store?

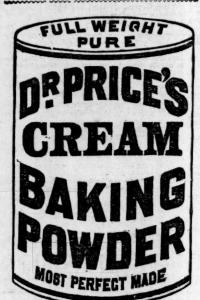

I beg pardon for this long article, but my reputation, for which I have worked so long, has been unjustly attacked by a rival in busines, and a per-sonal enemy, and I could not afford to allow it t pass unnoticed and have but endeavor d to defend myself. Very respectfully, Manager Jacobs' Pharmacy Company.

WATCHING THE CASE.

The Cartwright Murder Trial at Greenville.

A Short History of the Killing-The Evice Given In-The Plea of Insanity-Other News.

GREENVILLE, Ga., February 25.—[Special.]
The Cartwright case dragged its slow length along all day yesterday, scores of witnesses being examined on both sides. The defense ed more than a day in its testimony, the sheriff, jailer, physicians and family, many neighbors and his lawyers, Messrs. Park and

McLaughlin, testifying to the insanity, at times, of the accused. His mother said he had received in childhood blows on the head from an ax, mattock, and a fall from a mule, and that he always was weak-minded, and at times not accountable for any act done. After the killing, the fam estified that Cartwright ran home, a dis-e of only a few hundred yards, pistol in hand, saying no harm was done, that he left the man standing up, and that God told him hoot Johnston. He said Johnston had atted down with a child in his arms, slyly icked up a rock, and was going throw at him as he fired. He said he ran home with his pistol in hand fearing Johnston's dog, which had run out into the road after the third shot was fired.

Johnston and Cartwright were bosom friends, never had a cross word, and Johnston was at Cartwright's house only a night or two before the killing, and everything was pleas-ant. The relatives and some neighbors testifled that the prisoner had acted very strangely several days before the killing, but none had aspected homicidal tendencies.

In rebuttal, many neighbors testified that the accused was sane, and Messrs. Dunn and Dixon talked with him only an hour before the killing, and noticed nothing strange in his manner nor conversation. After the killing, Cartwright went home, undressed and went to bed, and, his mother said, went to sleep: but when the arresting party came he got up, came in the room, said he had killed Johnston and was not sorry for it. To the magistrate he said that he killed Johnston rather than be disgraced. The prosecution will endeavor to make the jury believe that John-ston had, a short time before the killing, detected Cartwright in something discredit-able, and that Cartwright killed Johnston to

The testimony of the magistrate, and one other witness who heard the same thing, will be the basis of this theory. The prisoner's crazy actions in jail, and his unprovoked assault upon a fellow prisoner, and other silly conduct, will be characterized as shrewd acting for the purpose of escaping the law's penaltie terested and unbiased listeners pr nounce the man crazy, while others are in with much interest.

Judge Harris presides with much ability and impartiality.

QUASHED ON TECHNICALITY. The True Bills Against the Georgia Railroad Company Dropped.

DECATUR, Ga., February 25.—[Special.]
The grand jury of DeKalb superior court at the present term found four true bills against Major J. W. Green, general manager of the Georgia railroad, for running freight trains on Sunday after 8 o'dlock as in Outside the Sunday, after 8 o'clock, a. m., in October last.

The bills of indictment were framed under section 4,578 of the code which provided that "the time of arrival, according to the schedule by which the train or trains started on the trip, shall not be later than 8 o'clock on Sun-trip, shall not be later than 8 o'clock on Sunday morning."

This morning Major J. B. Cumming, the Chevalier Bayard of the Augusta bar, appeared in behalf of Major J. W. Green, and moved to quash the indictment. He stated that while it was true that in 1884 the Georgia railroad pleaded guilty to a similar indictment, he had discovered on the statutes, in the acts of 1876, the following act:

Whereas, under the existing laws of this state, many freight trains have to lie over during the Sabbath day at way stations, remote from the families and churches of employes; therefore, wer during the Sabbath (asy at way stations, remote from the families and churches of employes; therefore,

Be it enacted. That from and after the passage of this act it shall and may be lawful for all freight trains on the Georgia railroad, running over saidroad on Saturday night tor n through to destination; provided, that the time of arrival according to the schedule by which train or trains started on the trip shall not be later than 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning.

Under this special act Major Cumming contended that no offense was charged.

Solicitor-General Candler said that he was not sure that this special act was constitutional, as it simply applied to the Georgia railroad. But inasmuch as he could prove that the road ran fright trains on Sunday after 9:30 in the morning, he would make no objection to quashing the indictment, as at the next term he would frame new indictments.

It is possible that there will be twenty-five or thirty true bills found at the next term against this corporation for running freight trains on Sunday.

KNOXVILLE IS AWAKE.

The Citizens Organize to Push the Interests of That Town.

KNOXVILLE, Ga., February 25.—[Special.]—Knoxville is wide awake. She is on the road to success. The citizens of the town and vicinity held an enthusiastic meeting at the courthouse to organize and to adopt the best measure to aid in the upbuilding of Knoxville where she is and to prevent its moving to the railroad three-quarters of a mile west of the same. Nearly every person present signed a resolution agreeing to unite and work together in every question affecting the interest of the town. Committees were appointed to look after the opening of new streets and to put the road in good repair from here to the station.

or two exceptions, agreed to give one third of their lots to any one who will build upon them. There are a number of lots on the them. There are a number of lots on the public square to give away with this condition, and quite a number on the main streets for dwellings. They mean to build the town up, and they will not be disappointed. Knoxville is the county site of Crawford. It is the only town in the county. She has fourteen to fifteen miles of territory in every direction, with no competition. The lands for agricultural purposes cannot be surpassed in the state. We have an exhaustless amount of fine yellow pine. The belt of timber is eight miles wide and stretches across the county. It is conceded by all that Knoxville has the most advantages and the best prospects for a flourishing town of any on the Atlanta and Florida (new) railroad which will soon be completed.

HE SOLD THE ORGAN.

A Negro Who Played a Sharp Game, But Lost.

'Macon, Ga., February 25,—[Special.]—About four months ago, a negro man named Columbus Howard purchased an organ from the Georgia Music house, for the amount of seventy-five dollars, on the installment plan, paying five dollars cash, and signing the regular lease contract for the remainder. When the time came for another payment, Columbus failed to show up, and all efforts to find him or the organ proved fruitless.

bouse, received notice that he could find Co-lumbus. He promptly proceeded to do so. He discovered that the negro had sold the organ for about fifteen or twenty dollars in order to meet a note of his held by Mr. A. A. Bell, at A. J. Bear's clothing store. Mr. Irwin imme-diately had the negro arrested, and later en ordered a warrant to be issued. The case will be heard Monday.

ATHENS, Ga., February 25.—[Special.]—bout fifty hands made a contract today with essrs. Braddon & Martin, to work on the accon and Covington road between here and torgis factory. Comfortable quarters are begarranged near the factory, and everything in readiness tonight to begin work on Mon-

PLANTING THE CLASS TREE.

The Avocations Which the Young Men are Likly to Pursue.

Oxford, Ga., February 25.—[Special.]—
Friday evening last was the time set for the planting of the senior class tree, and notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather the citizens turned out in toto, crowding the college chapel, to witness the exercises. The history, by Mr. J. H. Ardis, and the prophecy by Mr. G' H. Swearinge, rdid credit to the producers and were highly complimented by all as the best ever heard, The senoir class numbers thirty, representing five states, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Indian Territory, and California. The average age of the class will be at graduation twenty-two years two months. As to the vocations of the members of the class seven will be lawyers, six merchants, three ministers, one civil engineer, two farmers, three teachers, one surgeon, one physician, one pharmacist, two undecided.

Mr. J. Lee Key was the orator of the day; Mr. J. H. Ardis, class historian; Mr. G. H. Swearinger, class prophet: Mr. W. W. Carrol, class poet; Mr. Juo. W. Jones, the mocking bird; Mr. J. C. Parker, chaplain.

ANOTHER RIOTER CONVICTED.

ANOTHER RIOTER CONVICTED. Henry Goldsmith Found Guilty of Felony. Teleny.

DECATUR, Ga., February 25.—[Special.]—
The trial of Henry Goldsmith, for aiding and assisting in the rescue of Wesley Hubert, was resumed in DeKalb superior court this morning. At the conclusion of the evidence, Colonel John S. Candler, solicitor-general, briefly and pertinently recited the law bearing on the case. Hon. Hal C. Jones followed for the defense, Mr. W. T. Turnbull closed for the defense; Hon. J. B. Stewart concluded the argument for the state. Judge Clark charged defense; Hon. 3. B. Stewart constituent the argument for the state. Judge Clark charged the jury, and, after retiring for less than 30 min-utes, they returned a verdict of guilty. This is number three that has been convicted. Judge Clark will not pass sentence upon Henry until next. Several others remain in jall, and will be tried next week. Solicitor-General Candler has been untiring, and his efficiency and acumen in the case have won from bar and jurors the highest commendation. He is voted the right man in the right place.

ROME'S ONWARD MARCH.

An Enthusiastic Meeting of Prominent Citi-Rome, Ga., February 25.—[Special.]—An enthusiastic meeting of citizens was held tonight, to discuss important enterprises about to be established here. Ringing speeches were made by Captain J. L. Bass, Judge Joel Branham, Mr. W. T. Cheney and others. It was announced that a southern scale works, with a zens Held. announced that a southern scale works, with a capital of $40,000, would be removed to Rome; that a canning factory was an assured fact; and that there was reasonable certainty of the establishment of a chair factory. Over $200,000 will be spent in new buildings on Broad one will be spent in new buildings on broad and other streets within the next three months. On April 18th there will be a grand sale of lots by the Rome land company, and Rome will be thoroughly advertised. It was resolved to hold a semi-monthly conference of business men to consider the best means of promoting Rome's interest.

TWO THIEVES ESCAPE. The Daring Act of Two Car Thieves Near

ALBANY, February 25.—[Special.]—A systematic robbery of the Savannah, Florida and Western night freight trains between Camilla and Albany has continued for some time. Thursday night, as the train left the Camilla depot Foreigner Love saw free continued. Thursday night, as the train left the Camina depot Engineer Loyd saw two men force open a car door and enter it. He stopped the train and, with the fireman, went back to the car and attempted to close the doors and fasten them in. They sprang out. The officers grasped one of them in his flight, but he pulled away and fell into a pond. Both escaped.

The Senatorial Party

SAVANNAH, Ga., February 25.—[Special.]— The senatorial party, which has been in Florida for four days past, was invited to stop over here today, but missed the train at Jacksonville this morning. Tonight the senators arrived on the regular train, but they wanted to be in Washington Monday, and declined the invitation to spend tomorrow here with re-

Dublin's Proposed Academy.

Dublin, Ga., February 25.—[Special.]—I has been determined by an almost unanimou vote of the citizens of Dublin to issue bonds to the amount of $5,000 for the purpose of building a nice academy. This, together with the building of a roomy and elegant hotel, which has been undertaken by a joint stock company, will add greatly to the already attractive features of our flourishing town.

The Farmers' Alliance.

The Farmers' Alliance gave their order to James E. Randolph for fifty tons of guand made in our town. Mr. Randolph has been made in our town. Mr. Randolph has been running a guano factory here for two seasons and his goods give good satisfaction. This is commendable in the alliance, as it fosters and encourages a home institution, and the club can rest assured that they will get a good guano. Mr Randolph is better prepared than ever to give satisfaction.

The Rising Streams.

ATHENS, Ga., February 25-[Special.]—On account of the extreme high water, the Athens factory was compelled to shut down this morning. Reports from the country state that the small streams are rising fast, and in some places carrying off bridges and injuring small grain. Farmers in this section are taking advan-

Mad Dogs in Roswell.

Roswell Junction, Ga., February 25.—
[Special.]—A mad dog passed through this place today, attacking every dog in his path. Three were bitten within ten minutes' time, which created considerable excitement among the citizens, and thus a massacre of dogs took place, and four dogs were exterminated forthwith. Several other dogs have been heard of as being bitten by the rabid one. An issue for the next legislature to run upon.

ELBERTON, Ga., February 25.—[Special.]—Elberton property is on a boom now, owing partly to the certain location of the Georgia, Carolina and Northern railroad through the town. The locating corps of that road is now in town locating the mest practicable and cheapest route as regards right of way through the town. The road is now considered a certainty and real estate has advanced all along the line.

A New Factory in Athens.

Athens, Ga., February 25.—[Special.]—It is currently reported today that the Georgia Factory company had made all necessary arrangements to build another large factory on the Oconee river about a quarter of a mile below the present building. Mr. John White, one of the owners, stated that the Macon and Covington railroad would run very near this factory, and a great deal of money will be spent in its completion. I remember the last winter I spent with my uncle very well; it was a memorable season, and his manners were peculiar, even for him. He was getting worse and worse, they said in Bilge street; the neighbors were not safe from scoffs and taunts when they passed him in the street, and the little children shrieked at sight of him and ran away, though their big brothers made up for this by throwing stones. In the corner of the bar-parlor he was only bearable when fast asleep, or after his fourteenth glass of grog, when he would become boastful of his past exploits, or maudlin over the helplessness which hindered him from repeating them. Even in his miserable old age he seemed to love the sea, and to be more keen and clear in his faculties when he could hear it roaring and breaking on the beach, with the wind shrieking like a woman. One winter's night, when the elements were going it in real earnest, he sat huddled in his big chair, with his legs on a footstool and a warm rug round him, listening with grave satisfaction to the storm.

"Had I been as young as you are I would have been out in this," he said to me, "I wouldn't have been hulking here scouring pewter pots."

I had done my scouring long ago, but it was Murdered About a Bridle. RINGGOLD, Ga., February 25 .- [Spe Rivedoub, Ga., February 20.—[Special.]— Yesberday at 5 p. m., two miles north of Cray-fish Springs, on the Chattanoogs, Rome and Columbus railroad, Jess MeGugin and Taylor Camp, both colored, quarreled about a bridle, McGugin got his pistol and shot Camp through the heart. Camp died instantly. McGugin has skipped the country.

Douglasville, Ga., February 25.—[Special.] About a month ago, through a teachers agency at Birmingham, Ala., M. L. Rouse was secured to take charge of the high school here.

Singular Story of a False Friend and

F. W. Robinson in Philadelphia Press, CHAPTER I.

DO NOT know why I should keep this story to myself-to myself and second self, more correctly speaking-any longer There is nigh upon a score of years between the time of happening and now, and all the harm the telling of it might have done is dead and gone as Uncle Samuel is. But to begin at the be ginning-which is ship. me, being an orderly man

My Uncle Samuel was my guardian, my father and uncle rolled into one, and took care of me after my own father was drowned. My mother was Uncle Samuel's sister, and became his housekeeper after father's death, attended to her brother's business when he was out at sea, put up with all his bad tempers when he ore and was "a perfect slave to the old brute," it was said in Deal; though my mother was only a hard working woman, and Sam Nangle was not exactly a brute. However, my mother did not live to see her brother at his worst—that was in the latter years of his life, when he lost the proper use of his limbs and had to creep about the house, clinging to the walls and furniture, or to toddle down the street with a couple of crutches which would street with a couple of crutches which always go very wide apart, and which he was never able to use with any fair amount of grace. At this period of his career Samuel Nangle was certainly trying, and no one was more certain of that than myself, his nephew -Martin Townsend, at your service The most trying time was when I was about five and twenty years of age, and mother had been dead fifteen out of them. Then he was a trouble to most folks who had anything to do with him, to me in particular, to whom the care of the Flying Fish Inn, and of the Flying Fish steamtug, and of my uncle, the proprietor of both these Flying Fish, had come by way of

"Not that you're going to have my little tug, when I'm dead and gone, Martin," my uncle would say; "they're both too good for you, and I haven't slaved and toiled and moiled all these blessed years to fatten a lazy hunk like you. be more out of your reckoning than you have ever been in your life. You've been too pigheaded, too stuck-up, too damned silly to please me, and you must take the consequences. And hope before you die, Martin, and when you findyourself in the work house, that you'll be sorry you didn't treat me better when you had somebody to see after you, and to keep a house over your soft head. There, get out. And I got out accordingly, and left him to his own company in the little room at the back of the bar, where nobody came now to smoke a pipe or drink a glass of grog with him, my uncle having insulted everybody all round long ago, and lost all his customers, who would not come and spend money and get drunk in his back parlor to be told they were fools and asses, and encumbrances on the face of the arth, and gibbering, slobbering idiots, who knew no more findyourself in the work house, that you'll be bering, slobbering idiots, who knew no more about Deal, or ships, or the sea than his spit-on there. It was Uncle Samuel's idea—and I am rather It was Uncle Samuel's idea—and I am rather disposed to think that all uncles have a weakness this way—that no one knew anything save himself, that no one had ever done anything that was worth mentioning except himself, that no one had ever been so wise, so careful, so far-seeing, so lucky, so plucky as he, and it was his great affliction how that, though every-body knew this as well as he did, there was no one to say it to his face like a man, or give him any credit for it. He knew that was human nature, for he knew everything, but he sat in his big chair by the fire and cursed human nature for all that, and when tired of cursing human nature in the abstract he would man nature for all that, and when tired of cursing human nature in the abstract he would set to work cursing me.

Well, yes, a dreadful man in many ways, I own it. There was not much disguising of it in Deal, though I did my best to keep the old man's name sweet in Bilge street, where he lived

"Why you don't cut and run from him I can't make out," was said to me by way of sage advice. "The way you're treated, too. It's abominable."

wouldn't have been hulking here scouring pewter pots."

I had done my scouring long ago, but it was his neat way of putting it.

"It's a roughish night," I said, not caring to aggravate him by any defense, now that he was a little pleasant in his manner.

"I she ld have had steam up in the Flying Fish and gone. That's where the pull is, for the ships are sure to go to pieces or run ashore on a night like this, as sure as thunder and lightning, death and the devil, boy."

"Yes, exactly," I said; "and you were never afraid of danger?"

"Afraid!" he roared forth. "I was never afraid of anything, you fool, you! I never tell him to let me have the sandal-wood box which was left here to be called for."

"To be called for?"
"Yes. Which my father left with him—which he told him I should fetch some day."
"Oh! did he?" I said, completely bewildered now, and wondering at all this and what it meant and what was to follow. I was borne down by grim forebodings, which closed thick and fast about me as I shambled my way along the dark passage to the inn parlor. But I could not cut and run from so helpless an old man. He was so terrible alone, and my mother's brother, too, who had taken care of us when father went to the bottom of the sea.

an old man. He was so terrible alone, and my mother's brother, too, who had taken care of us when father went to the bottom of the sea. My uncle told me about twice a day I was stopping for what I could get—what would come to me after he was gone but he had already warned me there would be nothing for my share, and I knew that lawyers had been sent for and his will made long ago, and I was out of it. Uncle Samuel had one virtue—he was always charmingly frank—"infernally rude," some people said—and he led me distinctly te understand that I was "out of it" for many resons he was not going to explain to a jabbering parrot like me who would go and tell all Deal half an hour after I had heard them. Sometimes I fancied that he wanted me to get away, though what he would have done without me, heaven knows, I do not. But then I am a little conceited, like my uncle. He always said I was stuck up, and if so, it was in the family. Whether Uncle Samuel was rich or poor was a matter of grave speculation to me, and more than me. It was generally considered that he was a rich man—that he must have made a lot of money, and have a rare long stocking somewhere. If the Flying Fish Inn had not been a profitable speculation the Flying Fish tug had been, and he in the days of his health and strength had certainly been a shrewd fellow, and not overburdened in any way by principles. He had had his trials, certainly—he had even been tried for smuggling—but the tug had brought him in considerable profits, and he was invariably so early at a wreck that there were a few evilminded folk to fancy he must have arranged the wreck beforehand, which, of course, was not always possible. And he had never been afraid of work—downright hard, awful work, in the face of the storm, and of the death which the storm threatened, and Dare Devil Sam had been his nickname in the town for years before his dare-devilship stumped about the streets on crutches.

I remember the last winter I spent with my uncle very well; it was a memorable season, and his manne CHAPTER II. Uncle Samuel Nangle was sitting very much in the same position as I had left him, only he had dropped his rum and water from his hands and dropped als rum and water from his hands and the glass lay shattered into a hundred pieces on the floor. He was still staring at the picture portraying Grace Darling's heroism, or at a something beyond the picture, very far away, indeed, and which troubled him that night. I should have fancied in another min-ute that he had had a stroke of something if he had not said to me very plainly, but husking he had not said to me very plainly, but huski "A visitor.
"A what?"

"A visitor," I repeated. "Somebody who wants to see you, and who has come a long way to see you, I should say," was my reply.

"A long way, is it?" he muttered. "You don't mean from the grave, Martin?"

"Certainly not," I cried; "is that like me?"

"Nothing is like you," he said slowly and reflectively; "I don't call to mind anybody just now who was ever such a fool as you are."

My uncle was coming round to his old manner now and I was glad of it. His staring fit was over and it had scared me just a little. I had fancied something was going to happen, having been full of fancies all that day.

"Well, who is it wants to see me?" he asked querulously. "Who's come all of a hurry to ask after my health and to wish me joy of it?"

"It's a young girl."

"A foreigner-German, without doubt, or Dutch, perhaps.'

"A pretty girl, but very pale."
"Eh? oh, go on. With glass crosses in her ears?"
"Why, yes. But have-"
"And what's her name, Martin?" he asked now, very eagerly.

"Bertha Keefeland!"

"No—no—no—that's a lie. That's a dreadful lie of somebody's;" he roared forth, suddenly. "I tell you it can't be!"

"O, but it is, uncle." I exclaimed; "and she's come, she says, for the sandal-wood box which was left here to be called for."

"There's no sandal-wood box," he exclaimed, in the same loud key. "There's no Bertha Keefe'and, for she has been dead these six years. There's no—"

And then he fell forward, with a horrible screech, face foremost on the floor, and I ran to him and picked him up, and wiped the dust off his hard, rugged cheekeand forehead, and put him back again in the big chair from which he had pitched out. I was as sorry to see 'him struck down like that as if I had loved him or he had loved me a little, and I scuttled into the bar again for water, for the help of the young woman, who might run for a doctor for me or mind my uncle while I ran myself. But the shop was empty, and there was no Bertha Keefeland waiting for me to come back with my uncle's answer to her message. my uncle's answer to her message.

CHAPTER III. The host of the Flying Fish did not recover The nest of the Flying Fish did not recover from the fright or the malady which had seized him. He was one remove nearer to the end of his time now; I knew as well as possible that he would never want his cratches any more, and that one of these fine days or nights he would be sailing clean away.

He knew it himself, I think, though the doctor had not warned him. The doctor had left it to me, who was not likely to be a good hand at breaking to the old man such news as that, and who did not care to tell him, and thought it was well not to tell him, as it was not likely to do him any good. I did ask him if he would like to see the parson, and he swore at me with such fluency for the suggestion that I thought for a minute or two he was getting rappidly better. But he wound up in a milder fashion. stopped at anything, or let anything stop me; what I wanted I had always. If they said I shouldn't have it, I took it for myself."

fashion.

"Parsons ain't any good to me," he said,
"are they?"

"Well, I don't think they are much."

"I always hated parsons. I haven't seen one, of my own accord, since I was christened. I've kept out of their way."

"Yes, you have."

"Yes, you have."
"I know I have," he added. "I could have told the parson a blessed sight more than he could have ever told me. And, besides, salt water doesn't mix with holy water, does it?" 'I don't know."
'No. You don't know much."

I ventured to supply a word.

"And happy?"

"No, you wretched, limp, underdone, hairdresser of a man—not happy. Who could be happy with you? Who could be happy with a blazing pair of legs like these, and with—"

Then he was silent suddenly, and I mixed him another glass of rum and water at a peculiar sign he was accustomed to make with one hand and one eye, and which meant rum and water, hot, with a slice of lemon it. He did not say any more. He became strangely silent for him; for, when he had not me to talk to, he would talk to himself for hours—talk himself to sleep, and then go on muttering in his dreams in a rare, busy fashion. But that night he grew suddenly still and quiet, and stared before him strangely at a Grace Darling picture on the opposite wall, and continued to stare after I had left him to attend to a customer in the shop, who was a little impatient, and kept tapping so persistently with a piece of mney con the pewter-covered counter that I had quite made up my mind to sauce him for his hurry. But it was not a "him." When I had reached the shop, which was down a long passage, and a good distance from the parlor, between which and the shop there were more rooms than one, the Flying Fish Inn being a rambling old place, I discovered my customer to be a female, a young female and a pretty one, too, for all her pale face and big, blue, staring eyes. I did not know her for one of my neighbors—for anyone in Deal, where I knew everyone by sight, and I was sure she was a foreigner before she spoke a word. Her dress was very dark, but it was pot her ever two funny little "No. You don't knew much."

He did not say any more that day. He was very thoughtful at times now, as he had been on the night when he was spoken to. From the day of his last illness to this—a fortnight afterward nearly—he had never alluded to the girl who had called at the Flying Fish, and whom I had not set eyes on since that stormy night. And yet I believe he was thinking of her a good deal, and of the message she had sent to him by me. Presently I knew he was thinking of her, and could think of nothing else.

One day, and a very long and thoughtful day it was to him, he beckoned me to his bedside, with his thick, crooked finger. He had got very with his thick, crooked finger. He had got very hoarse, and there was a difficulty in making out all he said, but I had managed it somehow during the morning and afternoon.

"Martin," he croaked forth, almost like a raven, "I don't fancy I'm quite as well as usual toxicht."

"Perhaps it is fancy, uncle?"
"Am I looking as well? I don't want any lies light, her hat or bonnet seemed rather of a queer shape, and there were two funny little crystal crosses in her ears.

"What can I get you, lady?" I asked at last, as she continued to look at me—to regard me in my turn in the light of a curiosity.

Then she spoke in English, but with a foreign accent and in a very low tone.

"You cannot be the man," she said, wondering—"you are younger, taller, different altogether. You do not answer the description; you—" about it!"
"I don't see much difference in you."
"Then I don't suppose there is. You were never much of a liar, Martin. You have been over particular that way, and that's bad for a man who means to stick to business, hard and fast."

"But I am, and that's enough, ain't it?"
"But I am, and that's enough, ain't it?"
"All right," I said, although I knew it was all wrong, and so had begun lying on my own account. But I did not wish the old gentleman account. But I do not wish the old gentleman to get excited over any argument. "Give him his own way," had been the doctor's orders; "let him say and do what he pleases."

"I know I am not going to get over this, Martin," my uncle said. "That's all square enough; and I've had my innings, and don't grumble. But, Martin, where the devil am I going to?"

going to?"

"For mercy's sake, don't go on like this!"

"I didn't reckon on her calling for me, on her waiting for me," he muttered. "Fancy her always with me afterward. It's awful!" going to?

"Do you mean—"
Then I came to a full stop, but he under

"Yes, I mean that girl." "Bertha Keefeland?"
"Yes, Bertha Keefeland."
"How can she be waiting for you, uncle?"

He shook his head.

I could not reason with him. He was so con I could not reason with him. He was so convinced to the contrary, and I was perplexed and goosefleshy. Certainly Bertha Keefeland had mysteriously disappeared after giving me the message to rhy uncle, but people are always disappearing and being advertised for, and turning up again. And this might have been a practical joke, only—and then I thought of a sandal-wood box, which was up stairs, and had been up stairs for years, on the top of a tall, double chest of drawers belong to my uncle, and the mystery of it was beyond my fathoming.

But he let in the light upon it presently, and it was a red light, warning him of danger—a light as red as blood.

An end! As if there can be an end to things like that—as if she was not to come back some day just as she has done. I feel that's a clean breast of it, Martin, and you're not the man to put a rope round my neck for telling you; not you."

"No. Not I."

"No. Not I."

I stood and looked at him and wondered if he were raving at the last, for I did not think there were many more hours of life in him, and his senses might have left him first, as they will do sometimes, perhaps out of politemess. Could it be possible, I thought, that my uncle was a murderer, that this was true, and that the Bertha Keefeland of a fortnight since was a spirit from another world? Were there, after all, such things as ghosts to walk the earth and avenge the deeds which made them so? To look upon this agitated, earnest old man was to believe it almost. It seemed so awfully like the truth coming from those thin white lips. And presently I did not even doubt it.

"I don't mind telling you the rest of it, Martin; you'll understand then why I haven't left you any money in my will. It's more than twenty years ago when Casper Keefeland and I were friends first—when he fell sick one day, in this very room and was afraid he should die before he got back to his native village, affect he wife and baby he had left behind him there. He traveled a good deal between Russia and England, and always put up at the Flying Fish. The last time I am talking about—when he was ill, that is—he had brought with him a box made of sandal-wood, a legacy, he told me, from a rich relation who had died in London that year. Before he left Deal he got the notion into his head that he should die before he reached home, and so he asked me to take care of the box and its contents, being pretty sure his mates would stick to it if he shouldn't live to get off shipboard. For some reason, too, he did not want his wife to know of this at present. It'll be a surprise to her some day,' he said, 'and for Bertha. I'll leave it with you to be called for, Sam,' he said; 'it's safe with you as with the bank of England. Bertha shall come here for it some day, when she grows to be a woman—that's timeenough. I don't want for anything now; I may then. I can trust you, Sam, and I can only trust you to keep it sale for her. And, if I should that's a promise? And I said it was a promise. So it was."

"Well?" I gasped; "go on."

"But Casper did get home, though he was taken worse on the journey. He was never fit for much work again. He was something like I've been of late years, lad, I'd heard—a staring figure-head, a stuffed Guy Fawkes, a scarecrow of the cussedest. But he sent me one line, which somebody wrote for him: 'Keep it till called for,' it said; 'till Bertha comes,' and I kept it."

I kept it."
"And she came?" "Yes. Don't be in a hurry; you're always in such a beastly hurry;" he said. "I haven't told you what was in the box."
"Did you know?"

"One night I broke it open." "Oh!"
"I wasn't particular; I never was over-particular," he said; "and I wanted to be sure what Casper was making all this fuss about. And there were diamonds and large gold bits of foreign money, and then more diamonds in the queerest settings. They fetched a lot of money."

"Did you sell them?"
"I was in difficulties," he continued. "I had been tried for smuggling. There were heavy expenses for my defense, and heavier fines to pay, and I wanted money badly. When I wanted money badly I always got it somehow, and Keefeland's jewels came in handy."

"That was dreadful."

"Old Keefeland took no notice, and nobody called for the property. I thought he must have forgotten to tell anybody about it," he went on; "that he had gone off for good without telling wife or child—that he had thoughf I might as well have the things as anybody else. He was so very fond of me."

"I wonder why that was?" I said.

"You mind your own business, and wonder at what I've got to tell you," growled my uncle. "That'll be quite enough," he added, with a shudder, which lasted so long that I thought he would shuddder himself out of the world, and so end himself before his story. But he suddenly rallied, and went on: "One night, though, she did come—Bertha Keefe, land, at the same time, on the same sort of night as the last, with the wind roaring down the street, and shaking all the windows. She walked into the place, and asked me for the box just as she asked you, and I would have sooner seen her ghost then. God knows I did not know what to do. I had sold the jewelf and the foreign money. I could only see a prison for me, and—and I was always a desperate fellow in my heart of hearts. I asked her to step into the next room—the room close to the bar, which I always keep locked. You guess now why? and—and—but I've told you all the rest. You know—you know! and you have seen her risen from the dead. And she will come once more for me, too; we shall see her walk into this room again, you and Ito-gether: now, mark ny words. That's shear. will come once more for me, too; we shall see her walk into this room again, you and Ito-gether; now, mark my words. That's what I am waiting for."

"O, don't get that into your head." And I shouldn't like you to be out of the when she calls for me instead of for the I'm to be called for now, so dont leave me, Martin, not for a moment; there's a dear

CHAPTER IV. He told mt before he died that he had left all his monee to the nearest kin of Casper Keefeland, whoy ever he or she might be; that it was on his conscience—or what he thought his conscience—that this should be the destination of his money, which was not half so much as people thought he had scraped together. He told me something more than this. That he had made himself as hard, cruel and brute-like as he a could to me, so that I should be glad, rather than sorry, when he was gone—so that there than sorry, when he was gone—so that there should seem a natural reason in his strong distance of the strong dista as nails," but it was not to be. He could not as nails," but it was not to be. He could not have his own way in everything. Who can?

His voice was a long way off now—he was much weaker—he could hardly lift his hand from the bedclothes. He was not likely now any more of his long yarns. That to spin me any more of his long yarns. That very night again I was trying hard to think it was a yarn and nothing more.

Elater on he said in a half-absent way and yet in a way that was strangely impressive to

'She hasn't called for me yet. What a time she keeps me waiting!"

I put my hand on his, which was fidgeting restlessly outside the bedclothes, and said. "Don't think anything more of such nonsense. If it's all true you've told me—" "If!" he murmured, indignantly.
"Think of that a bit and how sorry you are

He stared at me like a man resenting my advice; then he made a sudden effort to sit up in bed, and fatled; lastly, he clutched my hand with both his own.
"I'm—called—for!" he said. "Here she is,

was Bertha Keefeland.

I thought in that moment it was the ghost of Bertha—a ghost with glass earrings!—for my nerves were unstrung; my uncle was just dead, and his story was not four-and-twenty hours old. I cowered from her among the bed curtains. I was not half a man for the next five minutes. I could hear my heart pounding away inside me like a steam hammer.

Here a very natural woman's value of the control of the contr

She had put a little hand upon his cold, hard forehead. She was so uncommonly coid, hard forenead. She was so discommonly unlike a ghost that I could not believe in Uncle Samuel's story any more. His brain had given way in his old age, and that was the explanation of it. An odd coincidence or two—life is all coincidences—had helped to make the yarn remarkable, and that was all.

"How long has he been dead?" she asked, in a whisper, and as if afraid she might wake him.

"Just a minute."
"I heard in Deal that he was very ill, and I came to you at once. I could not make anybody hear in the shop, so I thought I would not run away again, but come up stairs to where the footsteps were. I guessed what was hap-pening," she said, sorrowfully, "and I had hoped to see him once before his death; to give him poor father's message—father's thanks." "You—you have never seen him before

"Never."
"You have never been in England before this year?" I asked.
"Never."
"And you are Bertha Keefeland—Casper Keefeland's daughter?"
"Oh. ves."

"Oh, yes."
"Poor old Uncle Nangle." I murmured, looking at him, "how your mind wandered at the last, to be sure."
"Did he speak of me?" she asked.
"Yes, I should rather think he did."
"My coming to England distressed him a deal, reminding him, I dare say, so much of father."

father."

"Hum! perhaps it did."

"Don't tell him everything too suddenly—he's old, like me,' said my father, before he died," she continued; "give him plenty of time to think matters over—say you'll call again, or anything.' And when, a fortnight ago, I heard him shriek out after you had taken in my message to him, I felt I had been too hasty, and I crept away at once, giving him more time, as father wished."

"Oh! I see."

"See what?"

"See what?"
"That your father was a wonderfully considerate man. And yet—"
"And yet?" she repeated.
"My uncle never seemed exactly the man for anybody to be considerate about," I concluded.
"My father liked him yery much always. I

"My father liked him very much always. I don't think you could have understood your uncle," she said, thoughtfully, almost reproachfully.

"No. Please come down-stairs." I answered.

She waited for me to proceed, looking at me anxionaly.

"But before his death my uncle sche of those jewels, and said—whether in his sober senses of out of them, the Lord knows, Miss Keefeland—that—that," I stammered forth, "he had turned the jewels into money."
"Why should he have done that?"
"As a kind of loan, perhaps," I suggested.

THE TARIFF BILL.

A Few of the Reductions Suggested.

RANDALL'S IDEAS DIFFER WITH IT Mr. Mills Refuses to Telk-The Ohlahoma Delegation-The Public Building Bills-Other Gossip.

WASHINGTON, February 25.-[Special.] The members of the ways and means commitat which some radical changes were made bill now under discussion. The bill is now almost completed, the only trouble experience nittee being what disposition to by the commake of the fruit brandy question so as not to antagonize certain members in the house who are interested.

THE REDUCTIONS PROPOSED.

The maximum reduction proposed is about $75,000,000, of which $25,000,000 will come from a repeal of the internal revenue tax on nufactured tobacco; $10,000,000 from the twenty per cent reduction on sugar; $5,000,000 from additions to the free list, and the balance from a general scaling down of customs and duties on the articles embraced in the various tariff schedules. The committee still favor astic cher on iron ore and 50 cents a ton on bituminous Mr. Randall's schedule is somewhat higher, placing steel rails at $13 and leaving pig iron at its present rate of $6.72 a ton. He also proposes an increase in the duty on tin plate and the retention of the present duty on coal and iron ore. MR. MILLS VERY MAD. Mr. Mills said to-day the bill would be reported to the full committee on Tuesday. However, it will probably remain before the committee some two or three weeks before being reported to the house. Mr. Mills made the statement to-day that he considered it a very conservative bill, and that it should pass the house in less than three months; but when I endeavoved to talk with him he stamped "in regular Texas style," refusing to discuss the tariff or any other matter with the

THE OKLAHOMA DELEGATES.

The committee appointed by the Oklahoma interstate convention, recently held at Kansas City, for the purpose of urging upon congress the passage of Mr. Springer's bill, helda meeting here this morning. There are a dozen or more representatives, and they decided to strenously urge the passage of the bill.

Mr. Mansur, of Missouri, made an hour's speech in the house this evening in favor of the passage of the bill, and further consideration was postponed until next week. It will

CHATTANOOGA'S PUBLIC BUILDING.

CHATTANOOGA'S PUBLIC BUILDING.

The bill to appropriate an additional $75,000 for the Chattanooga public building passed the committee of the whole today. This gives Chattanooga an appropriation in all of $275,000. There are now only five public building bills on the calendar ahead of Mr. Grimes', and his will be voted on in the house about Tuesday or Wednesday. Mr. Grimes has many friends in the house and, this together with the true merit in the bill makes its passage doubly assured.

ALOTTERY DECISION.

An interesting case was decided here by Judge Snell, of the police court, this morning. The case was against a wholesale grocer, charging him with violation of the lottery laws for giving tickets with each purchase of goods. Such ticket, when a certain number are accumulated, entities the holder to a chance at some article which had been previously put up as a prize. The judge held that this was in violation of the law, and imposed a fine upon the grocer. This decision, if sustained, will prove a blow to many enterprising Georgia merchants.

occupied by Mr. Mansar in explaining the effect of the sill.

The floor was accorded, in committee of the wiole, to the committee on public buildings and grounds. The first bill called up was one appropriating $75,000 additional for the public building at Chattenoova, Tenn.

Mr. B and renewed his opposition, to what he considered a logse method of dealing with the public buildings matter, and finally offered an amendment providing that no public building shall hereafter be constructed unless some one of the executive department shall first certify to congress that no suitable accommodation for the service of the government can be obtained in the city or town specified, at a less rental than $5,000 a year.

The amendment was ruled out of order, and the bill was agreed to.

Upon the next bill appropriating $250,000 for the purchase of a site for a public building at Buffalo, New York, Mr. Bland took occasion to renew his attack upon the tariff and to advocate a reduction of the surplus by the payment of the bonded debt. He appealed to the house to cease to waste money on these public buildings and to come down to the democratic doctrine of the reduction of taxation. He referred to the president's message (a reference which was received with applause on the democratic side) and as a democrat denounced every attempt to take the people's money from the treasury by the Blair educational bill, public building measures and other squandering propositions.

Mr. Dibble suggressed that the gentleman from Missouri (Bland), by his course of action in regard to public building measures, was violating the spirit of the resolution making those measures a special order.

Mr. Bland replied that he would not permit a handful of men to sweep those bills through in shame and scandal, but he would avail himself of his constitutional right to require a quorum to vote on every proposition.

"That was dreadful."

"Old Keefeland took no notice, and nobody called for the property. I thought he must have forgotten to tell anybody about it," he went on; "that he had gone off for good without telling wife or child—that he had thought I might as well have the things as anybody else. He was so very fond of me."

"I wonder why that was?" I said.

"You mind your own business, and wonder at what I've got to tell you," growled my uncle. "That'll be quite enough," he added, with a shudder, which lasted so long that I thought he would shudder himself out of the world, and so end himself before his story. But he suddenly rallied, and went on: "One night, though, she did come—Bertha Keefeland, at the same time, on the same sort of night as the last, with the wind roaring down the street, and shaking all the windows. She walked into the place, and asked me for the box just as she asked you, and I would have sooner seen her ghost then. God knows I did not know what to do. I had sold the jewels and the foreign money. I could only see a prison for me, and—and I was always a desperate fellow in my heart of hearts. I asked her to step into the next room—the room close to the bar, which I always keep looked. You all the rest. You know—you know! and you have seen her risen from the dead. And she will come once more for me, too; we shall see her walk into this room again, you and I too getter; now, mark my words. That's what I am waiting for."

Was Uncle Nangle, after all, so very bad a specimen of a murderer, or had he learned repentance after his fashion and understood wharmemors was—what atonement? He told mt before he died that he had left all his moneo to the nearest kin of Casper Keefeland, whoy ever he or she might be; that it was on his conscience—or what he thought his conscience—that this should be the destination of his money, which was not half so much as people thought he had scraped together. He told me something more than this. That he had made himself as hard, cruel and brute-like as he could to me, so that I should be glad, rather than sorry, when he was gone—so that there should seem a natural reason in his strong distike of me for leaving the money somewhere else, Even after his death no one would suspect him of so babyish a thing as restitution, he hoped. He would have liked to die 'hard as nails,' but it was not to be. He could not have his own way in everything. Who can?

"I wasn't half as bad as I tried to be, Martin, that's all," he said to me the next night, when he was lingering on still. "I wanted you to hate me. But you wouldn't."

His voice was a long way off now—he was much weaker—he could hardly lift his hand from the bedclothes. He was not likely now to spin me any more of his long yarns. That very night again I was trying hard to think it was a yarn and nothing more.

Elater on he said in a half-absent way and yet in a way that was strangely impressive to me:

"She hasn't called for me yet. What a time ain't it?"

He stared at me like a man resenting my advice; then he made a sudden effort to sit up in bed, and fatled; lastly, he clutched my hand with both his own.

"I'm-called-for!" he said. "Here she is, by God—at last!!"

He gave a long sigh, shut his eyes, and died; and the breath had not been out of his worn old body half a minute before, to my horror and amazement; the door was slowly and softly opened, and there stole into the room the young woman, or the ghost of the young woman, who a fortnight since had told me that her name was Bertha Keefeland.

a fortnight since had told me that her name was Bertha Keefeland.

I thought in that moment it was the ghost of Bertha—a ghost with glass earrings!—for my nerves were unstrung; my uncle was just dead, and his story was not four-and-twenty hours old. I cowered from her among the bed curtains. I was not half a man for the next five minutes. I could hear my heart pounding away inside me like a steam hammer.

Here a very natural woman's voice exclaimed:

His brain had given way in his old age, and that was the ex-planation of it. An odd coincidence or two-life is all coincidences—had helped to make the yarn remarkable, and that was all. "Never."

"You have never been in England before this year?" I asked.

"And you are Bertha Keefeland—Casper Keefeland's daughter?"

"Poor old Uncle Nangle." I murmured, looking at him, "how your mind wandered at the last, to be sure."

I will simply ask you to take extra care of it, now that it is in your sole custody, and not in the good man's up-stairs, who has held it in faithful trust for me so long. I may tell you even there are jewels of considerable value in it, and I am very poor. That may interest you, perhaps—for my sake," she added, with a faint little smile.

THE TARIFF BILL.

A Few of the Reductions Suggested.

RANDALL'S IDEAS DIFFER WITH IT Mr. Mills Refuses to Talk-The Oklahor Delegation—The Public Building
Bills—Other Gossip.

WASHINGTON, February 25 .- [Special.] The members of the ways and means commit-tee held a very important meeting yesterday, at which some radical changes were made in the bill now under discussion. The bill is now almost completed, the only trouble experienced almost completed, the only trouble experienced by the committee being what disposition to make of the fruit brandy question so as not to antagonize certain members in the house who are interested.

THE REDUCTIONS PROPOSED.

The maximum reduction proposed is about $75,000,000, of which $25,000,000 will come $15,000,000, of which $25,000,000 will come from a repeal of the internal revenue tax on manufactured tobacco; $10,000,000 from the twenty per cent reduction on sugar; $5,000,000 from additions to the free list, and the balance from a general scaling down of customs and duties on the articles embraced in the various tariff schedules. The committee still favor $11 on steel rails; $4.50 on pig iron; 50 cents on iron ore and 50 cents a ton on bituminous placing steel rails at $13 and leaving pig iron at its present rate of $6.72 a ton. He also proposes an increase in the duty on tin plate and the retention of the present duty on coal and iron ore. MR. MILLS VERY MAD. Mr. Mills very MAD.

Mr. Mills said to-day the bill would be reported to the full committee on Tuesday.

Mr. Mills made the statement to-day that he considered it a very conservative bill, and that it should pass the house in less than three months; but when I endeavored to talk with him he stamped "in regular Texas style," refusing to discuss the tariff or any other matter with the representative of a paper that was so cruel as to dub him a "glittering asa."

THE OKLAHOMA DELEGATES.

The committee appointed by the Oklahoma interstate convention, recently held at Kansas City, for the purpose of urging upon congress the passage of Mr. & pringer's bill, held a meeting here this morning. There are a dozen or more representatives, and they decided to strenously urge the passage of the bill.

Mr. Mansur, of Missouri, made an hour's speech in the house this evening in favor of the passage of the bill, and further consideration was postponed until next week. It will probably be taken up on Tüesday, and then Major Barnes will make his speech vigorously opposing it.

A LOTTERY DECISION.

An interesting case was decided here by Judge Snell, of the police court, this morning. The case was against a wholesale grocer, charging him with violation of the lottery laws for giving tickets with each purchase of goods. Such ticket, when a certain number are accumulated, entitles the holder to a chance at some article which had been previously put up as a prize. The judge held that this was in violation of the law, and imposed a fine upon the grocer. This decision, it sustained, will prove a blow to many enterprising Georgia merchants. chants.

On motion of Mr. McMillm, of Tennessee, the arrears feature was eliminated from the bill; and Mr. Struble, of Iowa, moved to reduce the rate of pension to $30, contending that congress had made it a rule not to grant pensions exceeding that amount to officers of the rank of major.

Mr. Yost regretted that the house had seen fit to strike out the arrears claims. The widow would have been entitled to a pension of $71 per month, from the time of her husband's death, had she made application for it, and in justice the government-owed her forty thousand dollars. CHARLESTON, S.C., February 25.—The prresident and party arrived here at 9:54 this morning and were received at the station by the mayor and committee of eighty aldermen and and citizens. They drove through the principal streets with a military escort, consisting of the Charleston Light Dragoons and German Hussars. Upon the arrival of the train, a presidential salute of twenty-one guns was fired by detachments of the German and La-fayette artillery. At least forty thousand persons were on the streets during the passage of the party and the air was rent with enthus astic cheers. There was a sky of unclouded blue and the temperature that of spring. The party left Charleston at 11:15 a. m. Colton, Neb., February 25.—[Special.]—The Union Pacific fast train, No. 4, known as the "Flyer," collided with freight No. 19, at this point, at 9:30 o'clock this morning. The engineer of the "Flyer," was instantly killed, and eighteen people wounded. The freight, which was pulling into a side track, was struck the third car from the caboose. The car was loaded with benzein. The entire car was in flames. Engineer Michael Powell, of Cheyenne, who was running the "Flyer," stood at his post and was crushed to death. The passengers, among whom was General Superintendent Dickinson, were badly shaken up, but none were fatally hurt. The passenger engine, tender, baggage, day coach sleeper, and a number of freight cars, were consumed. Overland trains 1 and 3, which were run around the wreck by way of Julesburg and Greely, Colorado, to Cheyenne, were delayed twenty hours.

San Francisco, Cal., February 25.—[Special.]—The Chinese mail, which arrived today, brings the details of a remarkable tragedy in a Buddhist monastery at Roundridge, near Canton. A number of monks and nuns appeared to take the vows of the order recently, and among the applicants were two unusually beautiful young women. Their physical charms proved too much for two of the monks, who, when the others had gone from the temple, made a desperate assault upon the young women. Their screams brought the others to the rescue. The abbott decided to turn the monks over to the civil magistrate, but the latter sent them back to the monastery for trial and punishment. Each offender received twenty lashes on the bare back, in the presence of the others. This punishment so enraged all the culprits that when released they armed themselves with knives and attacked the abbott, whom they bound, and this time it was determined to make the punishment severer. It was resolved to burn the offenders to death in the cremating house of the fire might first cleanse their hearts. Then it was hoped that even on their behalf the saving power of the Buddha might be exerted. On the 17th of January the sentence was carried out. The two priests were carried bound into the cremating house, and in the presence of the brethren and a large crowd of spectators from the village, they were burned to death.

The Bullet Passes on and Wounds Another Man.

Man.

Chattanooga, February 25.—[Special.]—A very sensational murder occurred at Athens, Tenn., today. For a week Oscar Fifer, a white man, 21 years of age, and Matt Whiteside, a mulatto, have been quarreling every day. Today the quarrel was renewed, when Whiteside drew a big knife and started for Fifer, when the latter took from his pocket a double action Smith & Wesson revolver and shot his antagonist through the heart, killing him almost instantly. After passing through Whiteside's body the bullet struck a man named Brow; standing fifty feet distant, and produced a serious wound. Fifer surrendered to the officers and was admitted to bond, but preferred to go to jail to escape mob violence at the hands of the negroes. Tonight the jail is being gharried by a strong force of men heavily armed, and it is feared that there will be a hanging before morning. The negroes swear vengeance, and pay they will have the murderer at all hazards.

The Savannah River Rising.

The Savannah River Rising. Augusta, Ga., February 25.—[Special.]—
The Savannah has risen steadily all day, and tonight the bright moon shines upon a broad and rushing tide. Twenty-eight feet are measured tonight at the bridge, and the river is still rising slowly. It is not expected to go much higher, unless a new flood comes from the up country, as the present spurt seems about exhausted. The water is in the streets in Hamburg, on the South Carolina side of the river, but only in low portions of the city along the river has the stream crept outside of its banks on the Augusta side. It will take about five feet more to cause any serious inconvenience in any of the streets.

For Declining to Become a Candidate

RESOLUTION FORMED LONG AGO He is Not Physically, Able to Bear the Fatigu

New York, February 25.—Tomorrow's World will contain a three column interview with Mr. Blaine, which has been cabled from Europe, by T. E. Crawford, for some time the World's correspondent, in Washington, and now in Europe. Mr. Blaine in the course of a long conversation designedly asserted that under no circumstances whatever would he allow himself to be named in connection with the presidential nomination. He insists on the sincerity of his withdrawal and insists that he had made up his mind thereto long ago. He considers first that any man whose name has been associated with defeat in a presidential campaign owes it to his party not to allow himself to be renominated, secondly he is un-equal to facing the fatigues, worry and excitement of another canvass, all the more as he would feel himself bound to work as hard as on previous occasions.

Mrs. Blaine and other members of his family are most emphatic in their approval of his withdrawal which is definitive and neither hasty nor recent in its decision. Mr. Blaine will not return from Europe until June and not until after the republican convention. He declines to express himself on subject of republican candidates now in the field, but asserts that he did not retire in favor of any particular one of them. He is convinced of republican victory, basing his conviction in particular on the tariff question.

When Mr. Blaine was asked the direct question whether he would, under any circumstances, permit his name to be used again as a stances, permit his name to be used again as a candidate, he replied in a most emphatic negative, but then added:

"I do not wish to make any new affirmatives on the subject. I have said all that I wish to say in that letter. That letter, as you must know, was not a haphazard, offhand affair. It was the result of much deliberation and careful thought. You will remember that I told you in Paris, last December, that I had no intention of being a candidate again and that I practically made up my mind at that time to forbid the use of my name in the approaching convention."

THE REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN. The Meeting of the National Club in New York

NEW YORK, February 25-[Special.]-There were many republicans assembled today at the republican club, No. 32 West Twenty-eight street. They composed the executive and subexecutive committee of the national republican league. It is the first meeting of these bodies since the Chickering hall national convention of republican clubs held in December. The executive committee consists of one mem-ber from each state and territory in which republican clubs have been formed.

A session of the sub-executive committee was held at 11 o'clock and the general meeting was began at 1 o'clock. Both sessions were executive and not open to the public. Most of the day was taken up in listening to and discussing the reports of the progress of the club movement in the different states and territories. After these were heard plans were submitted for a vigorous canvass from now until the end of the campaign, the intention of the committee being to take up organization in every state where local clubs are unable to do so. All the members reported that the club movement is going ahead with unabated

Sanderson, of Newark, said that when the republican state league of New Jersey was organized, there were nineteen clubs in the state. Since then fifty more have een formed, and there is an active demand for constitutions for new clubs.

Executive Committeeman C. S. Forbes, of Vernent, said that his state is now organized more thoroughly than at any time since the "wide-awake" campaign of 1860. It has 81 clubs, all organized since December, the members of which include the most prominent repuplicansof the state.

Committeeman Barners, of Minnesota, who has led in the organization of 200 clubs in his state since the convention, said it was wonderful the way the club idea had grown in the state. It had been taken up with an enthusiasm far beyond the most sanguine expec tations.

President Foster, who returned last night from the Michigane lub dinner, said affairs in that state were booming, the club having 7,000 members with branches in different counties, and that there were beside sixty clubs now or ganized in the state.

FOR IRISH HOME RULE. The Mississippi Legislature Puts Its Views on Record.

JACKSON, Miss., February 25.—[Special.]— It was local day in both houses. The senate did nothing of a general character except to vote on the second reading of the constitutional amendment providing for a change in the age of persons attending free schools. The amendment makes eighteen years instead of twenty-one as formerly the limit.

A bill of rather a peculiar character was introduced in the house by Mr. Bowers, the colored member, providing for the relief from taxation of such persons as are unlawfully de-taxation of such persons as are unlawfully deprived of representation at the polls. His idea is no representation, no taxation.

The following resolution relative to Irish home rule was adopted by the house:

Resolved, by the house of representatives of the state of Mississppi, the senate concurring, That the people of said state contemplate the contest for home rule in Iretand with that commendation and sympathy which go out from the hearts of a free people to those who are struggling for that liberty which is an everlasting human right, coeval with all civilized society.

The senate adopted a resolution to adjourn on March 2. The house can not concur in this, as several of the most important measures before it have not been acted upon. The best legislators concede March the 16th as the earliest possible date for adjournment.

Alabama's Agricultural Quota.

AUBURN, Ala., February 25.—[Special.]
The board of directors of the Agricultural and Mechanical college met in Montgomery yesterday to make arrangements for the disposing of the appropriation by congress of the $11,000 to agricultural experiment stations known as the Hatch bill. They adjourned today at 12,30 after transacting the following business: The Auburn experiment station gets $3,000 for buildings, and $3,000 for an agricultural library in connection with the college. The branch experiment station at Uniontown gets $2,000. The chemical laboratory gets $3,000 for apparatus and $1,500 for an assistant chemist. The department of natural history gets $1,500. Transarer R. D. Glenn's salary was raised $500, and the remainder of the appropriation was given to printing bulletins.

in Missouri. St. Joseph, Mo., February 25.—[Special.]-A. The body was warm and limp and the child appeared as if in a sleep. Physicians were called, and after consulting for some time they finally agreed that the child was dead. She had been sick only a day or two, and died from scarlet faver spasms, one of which threw the heart out of place. The doctors had the child watched closely from the time of death until today, when the parents at last consented to make arrangements for the funeral once again. Fred Anschlag to Pay the Penalty of His Crime. SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., February 25.—[Special.]—Fred Anschlag, who murdered Charles Hitchcock and wife near Santa Anna, on January 22 last, was sentenced to be hanged. The court room was packed to suffocation with excited people. After denying the motion for a new trial, the judge took the precaution to order the deputies to arrest any one who should make the least demonstration when the sentence was pronounced. Judge Cheney then pronounced the fatal words which sealed Anschlag's doom. As the words "hanged by the neck until you are dead" fell on the murderer, scarcely a shadow of emotion was perceptible beyond a slight tremor of the lips, and not a word escaped him. The moment sentence was finished, deputies hurried the murderer out and back to jail, closely followed by a dense crowd. Anschlag looked back on the crowd as he got out, and their faces, more than anything, seem to impress him that he must die. He threw up his hands and cried: "My God!" These words were the only words he spoke and the only sign of emotion he betrayed. A large force of deputies kept the way to the jail clear, and the murderer was soon behind the barslagain. The date of the execution is not fixed.

How the Knights of Labor Will Retaliate on the Brotherhood.

Reading, Pa., February 25.—The impending strike of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad is an event of considerable interest to two hundred engineers on the Reading railroad, who lost their positions during the recent trainmen's troubles. These engineers were Knights of Labor and most of their positions were obtained by brotherhood men whom they supplanted ten years before. They now propose to retaliate and a movement to this effect was started today along the line of the Reading railroad wherever these Knights of Labor engineers are located. In case of a strike on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy road, they propose offering themselves for the places of the striking brotherhood men. A delegation will probably leave for Chicago early next week with more to follow.

Berlin, February 25.—The skill of the players in the game of diplomacy now proceeding before the eyes of Europe makes its successive developments in the highest degree interesting, but everybody recognizes the fact that the ultimate issue is war, whatever temporary advantage diplomatic trickery may achieve. The [Bismarck-Kalnoky combination may soon entrap Russia into a false position, from which only submission with supreme humiliation, can rescue her, unless she prefers war with incomplete preparations; or the czar's advisers may manage Bismarck's formal invitation to the czar to demand a restitution of Russian preponderance in Bulgaria, concealed beneath its apparent frankness a pitfall for Russia's diplomacy. If the czar had interpreted the invitation to mean that Russia was free to restore her status in Bulgaria by force, a cricis would have been precipitated and Russia would have been drawn into fighting the allies' trap. This has been avoided, and the protected comedy of negotiations will not be preceded by the tragedy of war. There will be much wearisome yearning about collective news, the differences amongst the powers, concert of the powers for the deposition of Prince Ferdinand, the concessions of Russia, adhesions by Austria and so forth, but amid them all the situation will remain unchanged or the porte may tria and so forth, but amid them all the situation will remain unchanged or the porte may condescend to the mockery of denouncing Ferdinand if the powers decide to declare that the order of things in Bulgaria is not quite in accordance with the Berlin treaty, but the result will be nil. Prince Ferdinand will not succumb till he is ousted by force. The central powers will accept no Russian candidate nor any settlement the czar can propose. Meanwhile Russia has taken advantage of the delay to complete negotiations for a French alliance to extend the mobilization of her forces, which is now practically progressing, and to set troops in line of battle, with her immense resources reorganized since the discovery of defects in transportation and commissariat departments.

The crown prince's bronchial irritation appears to be complicated with a lung disease, partly arising from puspecretions in the bronchia, which have affected the lungs. Official opinion in Berlin has become utterly despairing, and no weight attaches to the bulletins issued by the doctors in the face of known facts. Advices received at the palace do not conceal the critical state of the crown prince. Professor Gerhardt has not gone to San Remo. He takes a discouraging view of the crown prince's condition. He is convinced that the malady is running its course, and other Berlin medical experts concur in the belief that a fatal termination is inevitable within three months, and probably much sooner. The feeling in Germany is growing strong that Prince William ought to display greater interest in his father's status. Court circles know that the prince's anxiety and sympathies are intense, but that he has been prevented from going to San Remo by state exigencies.

the incapacity or unwillingness on the part of Mexican officials to act where Americans are concerned.

Captain Dabbertin was in the Mexican port of Tampico last week, when the American schooner Henry F. Jones, Captain Rossett master, from Tuxpan, Mexico, to Galveston, with a cargo of fruit, put into Tampico in distress. The vessel acted very strangely, though bearing no marks of ill usage by wind or water, and so soon as the anchor was let go, the crew deserted her in great apparent haste. Captain Dabbertin then reported the following statement made to him by the captain of the fruit schooner: Hardly had the steamer left Tuxpan, with their perishable cargo, than the crew started showing evidence of insubordination, making all manner of unreasonable and unheard of demands. In this course of conduct they were led by one or two of the foremost men, who were the ringleaders. They finally grew absolutely mutinous, threatening violence and openly avowing that they would take the captain's life on the shortest provocation. He armed himself, but being unsupported save by his mate, he could do nothing but endeavor to pacify the men. The cause of their persistent mutinous conduct was not stated by Captain Dabbertin) left shortly after the arrival of the first schooner. Captain Rossett further stated that his crew finally demanded that he should put into the nearest Mexican port, which was Tampico. He absolutely refused to do this. His refusal so enraged them that they doubly threatened his life, and gave him the alternative of navigating the schooner into Tampico or of being thrown overboard. Seeing that resistance was useless, he finally yielded with the intention of summoning assistance from the Mexican law officers. He brought his vessel accordingly to Tampico, and the crew seized the first moment to escape to shore.

1 Captain Rossett immediately repaired to the Mexican officials, but could obtain no aid from them. Having ascertained the nationality of the vessel and crew they would take no steps to arrest the offenders, or at least moved so languidly in the matter that no action has been taken up to the time Captain Dabbertin left the port. Captain Rossett will secure a new crew as soon as possible, and bring his vessel to Galveston, but his present cargo is totally ruined by being so long at sea. No further facts were obtainable from Captain Dabbertin.

A TOUGH STORY. Drummers Impersonating President Cleve land.

Columbia, S. C., February 25.—[Special.]—A cruel joke was perpetrated today upon the good people who live along the upper end of the Charlotte, Columbia and Angusta railroad. Yesterday a gang of waggish drummers, who had been "doing" that section, circulated the report that President Cleveland, after leaving Charleston, would pass over that road on his way home. The rumor spread like wildfire, and was given credence generally, and particularly by the country people. This evening, therefore, when the train from the south came along, the stations at Rockhill, Pineville, Femille, Seven-Mile Pump, etc., were crowded by men, women and children, all classes, colors and conditions, all eager to get a glimpse of the presidential party. At Pineville four hundred country people had assembled, and as the train drew up to the station a brass band discoursed a particular. On the rear platform of the Pullman stood R. L. Prempert and Dick Harvy, two of the most innocent drummers on the road. As the cheering subsided Prempert took off his hat, and addressing the throng informed them in the most bland manner, that he regretted President Cleveland was at that moment too fatigued and indisposed to leave his birth, but he (Prempert) had the honor of introducing to them the president's private secretary, the "Hon. Dan Lamont." A round of cheers greeted this announcement, whereupon Dick Harvy doffed his silk hat and in graceful and appropriate terms acknowledged the kind courtesies of the people intended for his distinguished chief. The crowd cheered, the band played, the locomotive whistled and shrieked, the train moved on toward Charlotte, and the enthusiastic country people dispersed, seemingly well satisfied with having seen, if not the president, at least his confidential friend and secretary.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., February 25 .- [Special.] Nashville, Tenn., February 25.—[Special.] Napoleon B. Lester, and old man with silvery white hair, was sentenced today by the supreme court to be hanged April 20th. He slept soundly while sentence was being pronunced, and when called, arose, stared vacantly around him, sat down and resumed his disturbed slumber. Lester was convicted by the circuit court of Wilson county, to be hanged for the murder of Lieutenent J. Lane. The plea was insanity. but judge and inry by the circuit court of Wilson county, to be hanged for the murder of Lieutenent J. Lane. The plea was insanity, but judge and jury were convinced that it was murder without mitigating circumstances. The crime was committed early on the morning of July 26. Lane, a lawyst, had just sat down outside his office door in Lebanon, Tennessee, when Lester stepped up behind him, emptied both barrels of his gun into Lane's left side. To avoid lynching, Lester had to be brought to Nashville and jailed, as Lane was extremely popular, and the crime without provocation. Lester had married the widow of Al. Gibson, expecting to obtain possession of the insurance on Gibson's life. Failing to secure it, he made things so uncomfortable at home that his wife sued for divorce, alleging cruel treatment. Lane was her attorney, and Lester vowed vengeance on him. His defense at the trial was that he had been driven insane by the unfaithfulness of his wife, between whom and Lane, he asserted, criminal intimacy existed. Lester had been divorced from one wife before marrying Mrs. Gibson. Lester is very feeble, and appears almost oblivious to the occurrences of the day. His only comment has been: "In killing Lane I did right and would do the same thing again." Poison has twice been found in Lester's cell, although he denies that he intended to use it, except to make him sleep. He has more than once stated, however, that the gallows should never get him, and he will be watched.

AFJ. J. Flynn, General Eastern Agent, Park Row, New York City. ATLANTA, GA., FEBRUARY 26, 1888.

The South and Her Old Eneu The New York Evening Post says that the growing admiration for Abraham Lin-coln in the south is one of the most interesting and encouraging features of our national development.

There is nothing very new or very strange in this. The southern people have always admired patriotism, heroism and magna-nimity, and when they have found those qualities in their foes they have been quick to recognize them.

Grant, Hancock, McClellan and McPherson were hard fighters, but it would be difficult to find a southerner who is not ready to do full justice to their merits. The grandest tribute to Sumner came from the ips of a southern orator. Horace Greeley, during the last years of his life, found his best friends among the people whose insti-tutions he had waged war against all his

The frequent reunions of the blue and the gray during the past ten or fifteen years show that this feeling is not confined to a few; it is widespread and general. The bitter sectional prejudices attributed by northern partisan speakers and writers to the ex-confederates and the younger generation of southerners are purely imaginary. The solid south is solidly American. She onit fighting when the war ended, and there has not been a day since Lee's surrender when she has not been willing to join hands with her old enemies in any work that tended to advance the peaceful interests and the general welfare of the republic.

A New England Mystery. For several years the people of Rhode Island and Massachusetts have been in a bewildered state of mind over the wonderful luck of Doc Levi Wilson. The leading features of the case have been printed time and again, but new developments have kept public curiosity excited all the time. It will be recollected that Wilson was an ignorant, disreputable tramp. One day he visited a millionaire manufacturer named Moen, and after that day he always had plenty of money. He invested hundreds of thousands of dollars in various enterprises, and married well. A year or so ago he got into trouble. He was sued for seduction. wife obtained a divorce. His wealth melted away, and as Moen refused to extend further aid he went to jail. ' As will be seen by the circular of the railroad commission, published in another column, official indorsement is given the action of the Western and Atlantic railroad management in reducing the passenger tariff for that line. The railroad commission goes further than this: it establishes the reduced rate as the maximum rate for that road, and after the first of March the Western and Atlantic road cannot charge more than the rate fixed by its new tariff. which takes effect on that day, unless by authority of the railroad commission.

As appears in the circular, this action was taken by the commission on application of the Western and Atlantic railroad company, which thus receives the official backing of the state in making its great reduction in of the Southern Tariff association concerning the Western and Atlantic's course, that road will not be affected in that its new rate is established by the state, and it could not alter it now if it desired, except by consent of the state, through the commission. The Southern Tariff association, however, has shown a disposition to let this road alone in the movement, in which it has voluntarily taken the initiatory step. In this the association has acted wisely. If the manement of a road is convinced that it is to its advantage to reduce its passenger rates below that of other railroads, there is no just reason why these other railroads should seek to compel such a road to maintain the higher rate; in other words, if railroads in Alabama and Tennessee charge three cents a mile, and a Georgia railroad thinks that it can better profit by charging two and a half cents, it would be an injustice not only to the latter road, but to the people who are affected by its rates, that these other railroads should compel it to maintain a standard which it is anxious to lower. thereby directly benefitting the great number ple who travel over its line. If other roads had it in their power to force a railroad, which wanted to reduce rates, to stick to the standard, they would thus have the power of levying an exorbitant tax on the this tariff, and to force that road back to the old standard, it would become a conflict between the state and the railroads; and the esult would be that instead of the Western and Atlantic being forced back to a three cent rate, it is more than probable that the other roads would be made to adopt the lower rate established by the Western and Atlantic.

It is to be hoped, however, that this road will have a full and fair opportunity of demonstrating the advantage of the low standard which it has established. It certainly deserves the hearty encouragement of the public for having done so, for its action can but result in making a general reduction in passenger rates throughout the south. We are of the opinion that all other railroads will soon see that it is to their adantage to adopt a similar course, and we believe that it will not be long before the basis established by the Western and Atlantic will become the standard rate for ecepting the Situation.

The St. Louis Republican, which has heretofore disagreed with THE CONSTITUTION in regard to the repeal of the internal revenue laws, and as to the policy which we have maintained that the democratic party should pursue in its revision of the tariff, begins to accept the situation, and in a remarkably fair and clear editorial on "The Tax Reduction Bill," shows that it is beginning to accept, in good faith, the democratic platform, and that it is in favor of democratic harmony above all things. The Republican, which is one of the strongest democratic dailies in the west, says that it has information that the tax reform bill, soon to be reported, has been carefully drawn, and in a conservative spirit; it says that the internal revenue tax will be re moved on all fruit distillations and on all forms of tobacco, except cigars and cigarettes, which would insure a total tax reduc tion of about $80,000,000 a year. Of this the Republican says:

the Republican says:

We may safely assume that, if it follows the outline above, it has a better prospect of passing the present congress than if it were a measure less open to attack on sound economic principles. It's economic weakness in the compromise feature of internal revenue reductions is calculated to gain votes as well as to hold those which might have been lost otherwise. Impatient at the long delay in tariff tax reduction, the people of North Carolina, Virginia and of certain sections of Kentucky, Tennessee and Georgia, have grown restive. They would have preferred that the reduction sheu'd come first on the tariff taxes, but, almost despairing of this, have begun to demand tax reduction at any rate, and to gun to demand tax reduction at any rate, and to int out that they bear a heavy local burden unde the internal revenue system. They will be held in line by the tobacco and fruit distillation reductions, while the tobacco trade and the cigar-makers' unons will be conclusted by the faifure to remove the tax on cigars and cigarettes. * * * Considering the whole situation, we find reason to doubt the possibility of congressional action carrying out Mr. Cleveland's recommendation for the immediate reduction of taxes. If congress does fail, the whole matter, for protection and against, will immediately go to the people for decisive settlement, and in that event we would not consider the result in the least doubtful. The advocates and defenders of taxation for surplus would be overwhelmingly defeated. The Republican is directly on the right track; and if it can prevail upon the Mills element in congress to take a similar view of the situation, there will be no trouble about the passage of a bill which will insure democratic harmony, and which will make the democratic party invincible during the coming campaign. The Republican has heretofore been a strong supporter of that element of the democratic party which has demanded a sweeping reduction in the tarbeen in favor of letting the internal revenue is supposed that his signature to a recent laws alone. It is a good sign to see such a strong paper coming out so squarely on the side of the right, and it gives us strong hope that the democrats in congress will agree upon a measure which will satisfy the people in their demand that the surplus shall be reduced, and that the tariff should be revised by wiping out of all war taxes. The people have a right to demand this from the democratic party because it has solemnly pledged itself to reduce the surplus, and to readjust the tariff. The democratic party is now in power, and its future is in its own

Will it keep its promise?

As Mr. Cleveland said, the surplus is fact-what is to be done about it? Tariff reduction will not reduce it.

An Explanation After alluding to the fact that THE CON-STITUTION is the leading paper of the south and quoting some remarks from these columns bearing on the tariff question, the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette says: "And now will THE CONSTITUTION kindly explain why it supports the democracy, the party of free trade, as against the republican party, which is unequivocally committed to protection?" Well, we will try to explain, as clearly and as kindly as we can. In the first place, rates. Thus, whatever may be the action | the democracy has never been a free trade party. It was not a free trade party before the war, and it is less a free trade party now than ever, especially in the south where people, stimulated by the great progress the region has made, are beginning to cut loose from the prejudices that tradition has an cumbered them with, and to do some thinking on their own account. There are, however, in the democratic party some free trade cranks, just as there are some in the repub lican party, and these, by dint of sheer ciferousness, have succeeded in attracting

It is to be observed, however, that when any of these cranks are cornered, they fling the mantle of tariff reform about them and sneak behind the palings to hold long consultations with J. S. Moore, the Parsee merchant. Both Mr. Watterson and Mr. Morrison know that any attempt to turn the democratic party in the direction of free trade would be to wreck and destroy it utterly. Yet this is precisely what they are trying to do, and they grow very angry when Mr. Randall or THE CONSTITUTION undertakes to remind them that the democratic party is not a free trade party. In the second place. THE CONSTITUTION is impressed with the belief that the tariff question is not a party question and should not be treated as such. It is a business blic, or, at least, on so much of it as take question, and both parties should dvantage of such cheap rates as are offered.

Now, that the railroad commission has stablished the passenger tariff for the stablished the passenger tariff for the of partiagns on either side. Both parties owe something to the country; they owe it to the country to promote, rather than discourage, the industries which give employment to labor and which make for the we fare of all citizens.

In the third place, we have no reason to believe that the republican party would repeal the obnoxious internal revenue laws. and that is the principal issue before the people at this time. The republicans have had ample opportunity to do away with these laws, but they have manifested no disposition to do so. We would rather trust the democratic party on the line of reform in any direction.

In the fourth place, if all these reasons had no existence in fact, the attitude of Elitor Halstead and other prominent republicans would compel the south to remain solid. The protection of the social organization of the south is much more important to THE CONSTITUTION than any other kind of protection. Another era of negro rule would ruin us utterly. Free trade would put an end to our industrial development, but even this would not be so costly an experiment as negro rule. This is what the success of republicanism in the south means.

We suppose that even Editor Halstead is satisfied by this time that the republican party made a grand mistake in the south after the war. It flouted and persecuted the southern whites under the impression that they had a solid thing in the negro vote. This negro vote was a very fine thing for a while, but when the negroes lost all interest in the republican party, and the vote practically disappeared, some of the more thoughtful leaders saw the mistake they had made and acknowledged it. We may say here that it will not help the republican party for such men as Sherman and Halstead to sit on the fence and make mouths at the south about suppressed negro votes. The negro vote at the south has been suppressed by the republican party itself, and his fact has become a matter of history.

Perhaps this explanation will not suit the Commercial Gazette. We have often found that the truth is unpleasant to those whom

A Wonderful Invention.

From the Baltimore American. Eli Whitney, though a Massachusetts man, happened to be at Savannah in the house of General Greene when he invented the cotton gin. No nechanical revelation of modern times did more to expand commerce, agriculture and manufactures in this country. Whitney was ill-requited. The southern states, with one exception, treated nim shabbily, and southern members of congress him dered him from reaping the pecuniary rewards he had honorably earned. It was one of the sarcasms of fate that after he had helped to enrich the south by inventing the cotton gin, he was driven by dis couragement to the north, where he invented the racy.

It is now said that another invention has been bout perfected which is second only in importance to Eli Whitney's discovery. This new implement is cannot the cotton plant will command a price equal to that of the lint. It is explained that under present pro-gases cotton seed is not worth to the grower mor gases cotton seed is not worth to the grower mor than $6 or $8 per ton, and the oil manufacturers make only a reasonable profit after paying thate price. With the Crawford cleaner the seed will be worth from $25 to $30 per ton, and will give the oil mill a much larger profit than is made now. Cotton planters ought to realize considerable profits by the use of this invention. There is no reason why they should not have all the advantage at home, instead of allowing so much of this raw restrict to go abroad for manifulation. The prin-

The principle of protection to home interests ramifies in all sections of the republic, and it will be for the common welfare when the south manufactures the larger part of her cotton lint and seed. The value and fertilizing has been enormously increased o late years, thanks to ingenious brains and magical money investment. If it be true that the new cleaning process is an assured success, there will be corresponding awakening in other departments of trade to meet the public demand that inevitably

Miss Nadage Doree, who calls Atlanta her home, has made a number of hits in the support of Mrs. Langtry, but the last is rather starding. She has begun suit against "the Lily" for $420, and this, according to the Chicago Inter-Ocean, is the way it came about: Miss Doree played the part of Feltein in "As in a Looking Glass," and was a general favorite. Mrs. Langtry plays Lena Despard in the same piece. This was unfortunate, because Nadage wanted to play Lena likewise, and she claims that Mrs. Langtry grew jelkous of her aspirations. Beautiful Juno, but the "green eyed monster" was around that theatre for a few weeks. THAT EMPRELLA CASE.

In Which J. S. Galamore, Robert Browning and Jumbo Hunter Figure.

It will be remembered that about a week ago Mr. J. S. Galamore went before Judge Tanner and swore out a warrant for larceny against Mr. Robert Browning.

It seems that Mr. Browning stepped up to Mr. Galamore one of those rainy days last week, and representing that he was escorting a lady nome, succeeded in borrowing an umbrella.

"The lady's up here in the store," said Mr. Browning, "and it won't do for her to go on through the rain."

"Of course not," said Mr. Galamore.

That's the last time Mr. Galamore saw his umbrella. The bailiff tried to catch him, but the bailiff couldn't. Then the policeman took a hand, but they couldn't find Browning.

It was Thursday evening when Mr. Galamore emphatically expressed his intention to wreak his vengeance upon Browning's carcass the first time he saw him. He was evidently exasperated, and it was just at this interesting stage of the performance that the plot was thickened by the entrance of Officer Jumbo Hunter.

At one time in the debate Mr. Riddleberger picked up a tumbler of water which stood upon his desk. The water was placed there by a page, after the old custom of putting a glass of water upon the desk of any member about to make an extended speech. When Mr. Riddleberger raised the glass of water to his mouth, there was a smile upon the face of his brother senators, which deepened into a suppressed chuckle and was echoed back by a roar of laughter from the galleries, quickly checked by the sharp rapping on the desk by the presiding officer. Senator Wilson. Mr. Riddleberger smiled at this demonstration and bowed slightly. He took some minutes to brace himself after his unusual indulgence, and then with both arms high in air opened out on Senator Gorman, who looked as if he wished he were a thousand miles away, and, without interrupting his speech, walked along the rear of the senatorial desks upon the republican side and came straight down the broad aisle until he stood in front of the president's desk, and there he stood for a good half hour pouring hot shot into everybody and half hour pouring hot shot into everybody and everything, defying the senators on either side, and hauling up things in the forgotten history of their records that soon cleared the chamber of all senators except those who had nothing to fear at the hands of the relentless Virginian.

The district Court adjourned to the first Monday in March and the circuit court adjourned till next Saturday.

Before Commissioner Will Haight yesterday J. L. Leslie and Frank Lucas, both negroes, charged with making and passing counterfeit money, were tried. The evidence showed that these men had uttered counterfeit money in the form of silver dollars, and it was proven that some of this money had been passed upon John Faith, a merchant of the city, by them. Both were convicted and placed under a $500 bond each, in default of which they were committed to Fulton county jail.

Leslie was arrested several days ago by the Atlanta, police and turned over to the United The Federal Courts.

Leslie was arrested several days ago by the Atlanta police and turned over to the United States authorities here. Detective Ed Murphy brought Lucas from Conyers, where he had been captured by the marshal of that town. It is not known where these men made their counterfeit money, but it is supposed that they did the work in Conyers, where a good deal of it has been shoved about. There are others connected with these counterfeiters, and ere long more arrests may be looked for. Green Ellenbury, Willis Prince and Jim Greene were caught running a distillery in Dawson county. The still was destroyed and the men gave bond before Commissioner Carter, at Canton. Deputies I. W. Alexander and L. T. Moses made the arrest.

Major Moore is an old southern man. He was formerly mayor of Raleigh, N. C., and was a congressman from that state during the days of reconstruction. About nine years ago he moved to Boston and engaged in the dry goods business. He still owns, however, considerable property in and around Asheville several weeks before returning North.

Said Major Moore to a reporter: "I am a pretty close observer, and I form inferences as I go along. I can say that the South has picked up amazingly within the last decade. It is nearly eight years since I visited Atlanta. The city has made remarkable strides. Everywhere you go Atlanta is talked about. It is excellently advertised. I am only sorry I cannot stay longer in Atlanta."

CENTRAL COMMITTEE

Of the Georgia Republicans Held a Meeting Yesterday.

Call for a Convention to be Held in Atlant On the 3d of April—Interesting In-terview With Chairman Buck.

There was a meeting of the republican state central committee of Georgia at Good Templars hall No. 65 Whitehall street yesterday morning.

The chairman of the committee, Colonel A.

The chairman of the committee, Colonel A.

E. Buck, occupied the chair and John H. Deveaux, of Savannah, was the secretary.

There were present: P. G. Holt, of Macon; James Atkins, of Savannah; Professor R. R. Wright, of Augusta; I. M. Dent, of Hawkinsville; Elbert Head, of Americus; H. Bealle, of LaGrange; Rev. Max Manning, of Acworth; P. H. Craig, of Augusta; Madison Davis, of Athens; P. Morton, of Jackson county; E. S. Fleming, of Clarke county; J. H. Deveaux, of Savannah; Smith Easley and William A. Pledger, of Atlanta; J. A. Sykes, of Fulton; B. J. Jones, of Thomaston; H. A. Rucker, of Atlanta, and others.

There were speeches by Messrs. Atkins, Pledger, Easley, Wright and others.

Colonel Buck was asked last night about what was done in the committee.

"Well," said he, "you can say that no ballot was taken by the committee as to its preference for the presidential nominee. After the committee adjourned, however, it cropped out in conversation that a majority of the members are for John Sherman for president.

"A resolution was adopted appointing a committee of ten, one from each congressional district, to gather and report matter for an address to be issued to the republicans of Georgia in relation to the condition and organization of the party and the obstacles in the way of its succoss.

"A call was made for a convention E. Buck, occupied the chair and John H. Deof the party and the obstacles in the way of its success.

"A call was made for a convention of the republican party of Georgia, which will be held in Atlanta on Wednesday the 3d of April. The convention will be composed of twice as many delegates from each county as there are members in the house of representatives in the legislature. Each district, through its organization, will hold a convention and select delegates to the general convention of the party.

"Each county must give ten days' no-tice of the time for selecting dele-gates, and the election thereof will be confined to bona fide citizens of the county. These calls of the various counties must har-monize with the cali for a republican national convention." "What are some of the points in the call for convention."

"What are some of the points in the call for a republican national convention?"

"Well, here are some of them. Republican electors in the several states and voters without regard to past affiliations, differences or actions, who believe in the 4American principle of a protective tariff, for the defense and development of home industries and the elevation of home labor; who would reduce the national taxes and prevent the accumulation of the surplus in the treasury in harmony with this principle; who are opposed to the attempt now more openly avowed than ever before to establish a policy which would strike down American labor to the level of the underpaid and oppressed workers of foreign lands, who favor a system of naval and coast defenses which will enable the United States to conduct its international negotiators with self respect, who gratefully cherish the defenders of the country, who condemn and resent the continued and unjust exclusion of rapidly growing territories, which have an indisputable title to admission into the sisterhood of states; who are in favor of free schools and popular education, a free and honest ballot and a fair count; the protection of every citizen of the United States in his legal rights at home and abroad; a foreign policy that shall extend our trade and commerce to every land and clime, or shall properly support the dignity of the nation and the promotion of friendly and harmonious relations and intercourse between all the states, are cordially invited to unite under this call in the formation of a national ticket."

B. Tompkins:

Ex-Judge Henry B. Tompkins, of Atlanta, is strikingly like Governor Foraker, of Ohlo, in appearance, and has often been mistaken for him in New York. The ex-judge was a gonfederate soldier. He lived at Savannah, where he sat on the bench of the superior court for a time after the war, but finally removed to Atlanta. He is counsel for a number of leading railroads in the south and vice-president of one of the roads, which is operated in connection with the last Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia system. Charting about the changing sentiment in politics in the south, Judge Tompkins said: "I have made up my mind that if Mr. Cleveland is renominated upon a platform such as he indicated in his message, I shall not vote for him. How I shall vote will be determined by the other platform and nominee, but for Mr. Cleveland I will not vote. I am only speaking for myself, but I know that my sentiment is shared by a large number of the most influential of my neighbors who have never voted anything but the democratic ticket. If the republican party can filing away the bloody shirt there will be no question about the division on new lines in the south. On this tariff question, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina are all possibly republican, especialy if congress fails to take off the tobacco tax and keep on threatening coal and from.

the Views of His Message.

The New York Tribune of a late date has the following little interview with Ex-Judge Henry B. Tompkins:

gress sails to take off the tobacco tax and keep on threatening coal and fron.

A representative of The Constitution called on Judge Tompkins yesterday and showed him the clipping. After reading it very carefully, the judge said:

"Yees, that is about what I said to a reporter of the Tribune, and I stick to it. I will not vote for Mr. Cleveland for president if he is nominated on a platform which embodies the views of the tariff which he expressed in his late message. I am a democratic but I don't think the policy outlined in Mr. Cleveland's message is the true democratic policy. Those views are almost a complete reversal, so to speak, of the democratic principles enunciated in the democratic patform of 1884. Now, if Mr. Cleveland should go before the country on the platform of 1884, I would cheerfully support him—but that 1884. Now, if Mr. Cleveland should go before the country on the platform of 1884. I would cheerfully support him—but that he does not propose to do. Now, understand me, I am not against Mr. Cleveland personally. I think that he is an honest and capable man, and has made a good president, but I am dead against his views as expressed in his message, and if they shall be incorporated in the democratic platform and Cleveland shall be nominated on that platform, I will not vote for him. I will not vote at all. I do not propose to follow even the democratic party that nominated on that platform, I will not vote for him. I will not vote at all. I do not propose to follow even the democratic party that far. I think that the principles which President Cleveland's message contains on the tariff are a departure from true democracy.

"I stand on the tariff question exactly where Senator Joseph E. Brown stands. I am a protectionist and am in favor of the repeal of the internal revenue laws. I am for the protection of American industries first, last, and all the time, and I believe that on the views expressed in President Cleveland's message, if carried out, will prove ruinous to the business interests of the country.

"II Mr. Cleveland shall be elected on a platform embodying those views, he will have to carry them out as president, and of course would veto measures looking to the protection of American industries. The great Henry Clay was the father of the protective tariff system in this country. I think it is a wise system, and I will not cast my vote against it. I am in favor of protecting all American industries. That is where I stand. I would not vote for any man who is nominated on a free trade platform, or on any platform which has for its object the reduction of the duties on iron or wool, or anything also which would tend to interfere with the

THE CRUCIAL TEST.

BAKING POWDER.

The severe analytical tests to which the various baking powders have from time to time been placed have demonstrated clearly to the public the relative merits of the different brands from a scientific point of view. The Government chemists, for instance, have found in their official tests that the Royal Baking Powder gave off the largest amount of leavening gas, and therefore was the most economical for general use. For this reason it was placed at the head of the list and recommended for Government use. In addition to this, the chemists found the Royal to be absolutely pure, and the only baking powder that did not contain either lime, alum, or bone or rock phosphate.

But the crucial test of the kitchen is, after all, the most satisfactory to the housekeeper. A paking powder that never fails to make light, sweet, wholesome, and palatable bread, biscuit, cake, etc., upon all occasions, is the one that will be placed at the head of the list by the practical housewife, and received into her kitchen for continuous use. This test the Royal Baking Powder has stood for over twenty years without a single failure, and hence its reputation as the best baking powder made has spread from house to house, until its use has become as universal as its merits are

Gentlemen—My wife was a great sufferer with Catarrh for over two years. She has been a little troubled ever since she was a child with the disease. About two years ago we were in Mississippi, and while there she was taken down with catarrhal fever; we had three of the best physicians we could get. They broke the fever and left her the worst case of catarrh of the head I ever saw. Her nose ran profusely, and for a year I despated of her ever getting well. I tried several doctors and they could not cure her, and used every catarrh remedy I could hear of. I spent over $50 the past year for remedies, and all to no effect. At last it became so offensive that you could hardly remain where she was. I. LITTLE ELLA, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. and all to no effect. At last it became so offensive that you could hardly remain where she was. I offered $1,000 to any doctor who would cure her (and that would have left us homeless), but I would not have cared for that if she could only be cured. We saw an advertisement in the Atlanta Constitution of "Canadian Catarrh Cure," and thought we would try it, and went to your office, when you gave my wife a small sample bottle of your remedy, and told us to come and get a large bottle when that was out. I bought the large bottle, and before she had used all of the bottle she was entirely well, and her health fully restored, and now does more work than any woman I know. She used the medicine over six months ago, and there has not been the slightest return or the disease. I hope everybody that has catarrh may find you and be cured. I am a traveling man and have told a great many of your wonderful cure. Yours truly, errible Wound to Be Given in Fun-Cut From Behind-They Bring Him to Atlanta.

Test night, about half-past eight, a gentle man was lying in a room over Avary's drug store, on Peachtree, and the light held over the prostrate form revealed one of the thastly and dangerous cuts that was ever given in fun."

The wound is on the left side of the face, eginning about three and a half inches behind the ear, and running just below the ear and across the left cheek to the base of the nose. The wound is, in some places, over an inch deep, and had been bleeding continuously since half past six. It was thrown wide open, and as the sponge soaked the wound clear of blood the muscles and flesh could be seen to the bone. The wound was no sooner cleared of blood than it began filling rapidly, and the white face of the sufferer indicated that already the loss of blood had been terrible.

A tall, long whiskered gentleman had been watching the work of Dr. Avary, and turned away with the remark:

"For God's sake make them hurry up, Bob."

"Were you there when the cutting was done?" was asked of the tall gentleman.

"Yes, I was there in the room and saw it all. It was just in fun, you understand."

The poor fellow there is my brother-in-law, Wash Collier. He was cut out here on the Flat Shoals road about three miles from Atlanta, in his own house, by Jim MoWilliams.

"Wash is a married man, but his wife did not see the cutting done, and does not know that it is as serious as it really is. Well, the truth is that they had all been drinking, and were pretty full. I started by the house on my way home, and hearing a noise in the house I stopped at the open front door. Sam McWilliams, was dancing with Wash. When Sam saw me he stopped dancing and pulled me into the room. Somehow or other, I can't say just how for it was all foolishness, Sam and Wash got to talking about their manhood, and each one said that he was a better man than the other. Then they got to bumping against one another, and then commenced slapping at each other and after a while they sorter excited during the scuffle, and when they clinched be inst stepned hehind Wash and "You have killed me, and by G—d I'll kill you too, said Wash, with an oath. They stopped him, and the blood spurted all over the room. There was nothing done in anger. They have been raised together, and are good friends. The whole thing was a frolic. We put the poor fellow in a wagon and brought him here just as fast as we could come."

"Where is Jim Mc Williams?"

"I don't know. He hasn't anything to be afraid of for it was all in fun. I heard, as we left with Wash that they had a warrant out for Jim."

"Well, his wife."

"Oh, they just wouldn't let her go in, nor Wash. Just left word that he wasn't hurt see Wash. Just left word that he wasn't hurt badly and drove off."

Dr. Avary says that the wound is not necessary fatal, but exceedingly dangerous and repuired close and faithful watching. Several small arteries were cut, and it is possible that the liquor was what sustained the gentleman through that long and exhausting ride of three miles to Atlanta.

At a late hour last night Collier was carefully wrapped up and carried back to his home, though the ride was against the doctor's lanta, in the fork of the Flat Shoal and McDonough roads, where he runs a combined blacksmith and woodwork shop and a store. He is a well-to-do, prosperous and well known young man, and bears the best of reputations, but is regarded as a dangerous man while drinking. The same might be said of Mr. McWilliams, and both men were at the time under the influence of liquor.

The two men have been neighbors and friends from childhood.

A FAMILY FIGHT

In the Big Bonanza Saloon-Arrest of the Fighting Parties.

Last night, about half-parties.

Last night, about half-past twelve o'clock, a sensational fight occurred behind the swinging doors of the Big Bonanza.

The first that was known of the matter outside was when some one went to the door and called excitedly for the police. Officers Ald-redge and Lackey responded, but before they could reach the spot a 'crowd had gathered about the closed doors.

The policemen were admitted and the doors closed immediately. A minute later Mr. Lewis C. Sihler and Mr. Lee Span were carried to the stationhouse, and young Theo. Flesh was carried to the drug store a few doors below the Big Bonanza.

Big Bonanza.

The young man was considerably bunged up, the left eye being completely closed, and there were smailer cuts and bungs over his face.

The party finally concluded that it was best to give the story, and after young Flesh had been sent home in a hack and bond had been given in the other two cases, the three men sat down to give it straight.

Mr. Sihler did the talking.

"The truth of the matter is," said Mr.

Mr. Sihler did the talking.

"The truth of the matter is," said Mr. Sihler, "that young Flesh was drunk when he came in. I noticed that he was boisterous, and his father said something to him. I don't think the young follow cursed his father, but, at any rate, it wasn't long before he struck his parent. knocking him down, and then placed himself over the body, and struck him. Mr. Flesh asked us to help him, and I did so—or started to do so. Theo got my finger in his mouth, and, as I couldn't handle him without hurting him pretty severely, I singer in his mouth, and, as I couldn't handle him without hurting him pretty severely, I called to Span to help me. He threw Theo down and held him. The young fellow apologized to his father, and promised to go home quietly. Span let him go, and quick as a flash the young man drew a pistol, but before he could point it, we both grabbed him, and it was a pretty tough scuffle."

Mr. Flesh went on the bond of the two bartenders and his son.

"An' tonight I went up town to buy somethin', an' wen I come in he cussed me an' asked me where I'd been. It's his mother w'at causes all de trouble, an' I tol' her to leave. Dat made him mad, and he slapped me and choked me and kicked me—"

"But, he says you had an ax."

"Course I had er ax. I was most killed."

George's story differs from that of his wife. He says that his wife got mad with his mother and was about to kill her with an ax, when he went to her assisistance.

George was locked up for disorderly conduct and quarreling and wife beating, while his wife is to appear Monday for disorderly conduct.

Let the Robins Nest Again.

pleasure.

ELILOTTVILLE, N. Y., February 9, 1888.—Hon. J.

T. Henderson, Commis ioner of Agriculture, Allanta, Ga.: Dear Sir.—My family, in Greensboro, Ga., write to me that "the robins have come again."

After I got my family settled in Georgia, I was greatly surprised to find that throughout the state a general slaughter of those useful birds is annually made.

made.

Here they are protected by law—I had better add, by public sentiment—for no one would think of killing a robin, and they are very tame.

A pair of them annually make their nests on the cap of one of the veranda columns of my house here, and when setting you could almost touch the old bird without alarming her. It is a wise provision of nature that those insectiverous birds make their annual pilgrimages north and south, and in the spring, they remove north on the line of developing insect life, destroying myriads of destructive insects.

To those who know how rapidly insects increase their species, it will appear that the robin possesses infinite benefit to mankind.

They journey north as genuine insect scavengers at a time of year when the destruction of a single insect is equivalent to the destruction of a million. of those pests in the summer months.

While the robin annoys us here a little by eating a few small fruits, it is not noticed.

Here he spends the summer, and is a general favorite.

At all times of day a person can see them busy catching insects, larvae, worms, etc., while the farmer plows. They follow the plow in their search.

I wish you would awaken in the Georgia press an interest in this subject, and I hope the day is near when the robin will have as complete immunity in the south as in the north. Truly yours,

E. D. NORTHROP.

The National Opera Company Disbands-The WASHINGTON, February 25.—After the per-formance at the New National theater this evening, the National Opera company decided to disband. the National Opera company decided to disband. Business has been for a long time very indifferent in receipts, and the return engagement here this week was simply disastrous. There have been strikes among the artists' orchestra for the last four nights of the week, delaying the rising of the curtain and necessitating a change of operas. At a meeting of the company this afternoon, Manager Looke announced that the end had come. He said that there were no funds and that he had exhausted all means of financial help. The receipts of the matinea and tonight's performance will be used to take the company to New York. Manager Looke states that the deficit of sixteen weeks is $100,000, $75,000 of which is a loss to himself and friends. He has lost everything. Twenty-five thousand dollars is owing to artists and other members of the company, except the orchestra. Manager Looke says in time he will pay everything. He is now convinced, he says, that opera on a grand scale, cannot be made self-sustaining in America.

"Yes," I assented, "I should say so."

"I should not have been surprised if the box had been missing altogether," she remarked.

"I was prepared to hear you tell me that when I first called here."

it to her."

I felt a creeping up my back now.

"Your father's second wife," I repeated in a husky whisper.

"Yes. He married her a year or two after he had come back "om Deal for the last time. Married her for a nurse and to take care of me, left motherless. And she was too wild and passionate and—and wicked. She deserted him."

"What—what has become of her?"
"I don't know. She left a letter on the table one night, stating that she could bear her life no longer and must go away from him and me. She was then about the age I am,"
Bertha added, thoughtfully. "She was much too young for father. He was very fond of her, though; after she had left him he made her dress like her, and wear ornaments like me, too. It was a strange fancy."

Yes. I saw the story now, I thought, from its shadowy beginning to its end. The young wife of Casper Keefeland, after deserting her husband, had come to the Flying Fish for the sandal-wood box, had come with a lying message from Casper, and met her death in coming.

sage from Casper, and met her death in coming.

Uncle Nangle's confession was true, after all. Bit by bit I sifted it out. The old man had killed the wrong Bertha Keefeland, and year after year it became more and more plain to me—more and more of a terrible tale of temptation and cupidity. Let me turn away from it for good—it will be known only to Bertha and me until this hand is still which puts the record on paper.

Bertha is my wife. She came into my nncle's money, and, as she insisted upon sharing it with me, we made up our minds just to share our lives together as well, and so round the story like an orange.

And the moral of this story always strikes me as a queer one. If Uncle Nangle had not murdered Caspar Keefeland's second wife I should have never married Bertha Keefeland and been happy for the rest of my days. Bertha says I must not put it down as murder, but then she always looks on the bright side of everything.

Edith Vann Detected After a Career of Crime.

Macon, Ga., February 25.—[Special.]—This morning a negro woman named Edith Vann was arrested on the charge of shoplifting. For some time past the dry goods firm of C. L. O'Gorman & Co., and various other business firms, have been missing numerous articles, but no clew could be obtained as to their mysterious disappearance, but the eye of Mr. A. De Bernff, at C. L. O'Gorman's, detected the long-watched-for thief this morning. While returning from the rear of the store he discovered Edith Vann slipping some dress goods into a covered basket at her side. The *coman was accused of the theft. The basket was examined and goods, amounting to $40 were found. The woman was carried to the barracks, and a search warrant taken out for the purpose of finding more results of her operations. In the house was found by Officers Johnson, Jenkins, Jones and Hutching a very large amount of goods reaching the sum of about three hundred and fifty dollars. The goods were shoes, hats, cloaks, dresses, lace curtains, cushions and other very valuable fabrics. Her husband, Jeff Vann, was also arrested. A Large Invoice.

A Large Invoice.

Macon, Ga., February 25.—[Special.]—
Superintendent Boardman, of the Macon gas and waterworks, showed a reporter an invoice for fifteen thousand dollars' worth of gas pipes, which is only one-third of an order that was recently given a northern firm. The pipes are on the rail, and will be here in a few days. The company has also place an order for a large "water gas" machine, to be used in the works, but the old one will not be discarded. A Constitution reporter heard a rather queer story on the streets, which, if true, the perpetrator must indeed be a sharper, or one of the most innocent men alive. As the tale is told, it was accidentally discovered that he was using gas for heating, cooking, and lighting purposes. The case was investigated, and it was found that a very small bill was being paid. A plumber was sent to his house to see if the trouble was with the metre. To the astonishment of all, he reported that the gas main had been tapped outside the metre, and it had been used all winter without its being registered or paid for.

BOTANIC BLOOD BALM.

A WORD IN SEASON.

Everybody wants to claim something extraordinary for whatever they have as a curative agent. The value of B. B. is too well known now for "claim-making." It stands alone, unparalleled as a Blood Remedy and nobody can produce its superior. We don't fight over remedies, because B. B. E. takes care of itself. If you have anything the matter with your blood, try it—a single bottle will open your eyes. It is nonsense to try and argue with the public, and we don't do it. If one bottle don't do you any good, no matter how you suffer, we will GIVE you a gross. Read these certificates:

IMPURE BLOOD.

A Case in Florida Cured by B. B. B.

EVERLYN, NEAR BRUNSWICK, GA.,)
May 27, 1887.

My blood has been impure for a number of years. I broke out in ugly sores over my head and body and I could get nothing to heal them or purify my blood (though I tried other so called medicines) until I found the most valnable medicine (Botanic Blood Balm) B. B. B. I have been using it for nearly a year, and in that time have taken about one dozen bottles, and I feel that I am nearly cured; the sores on my head and body all healed. My health is good and I can eat anything I desire. EDWARD GLOVER. Yours respectfully,

Its Use for Kidneys.

JESUP, Ga., May 26, 1887.

I have been suffering from kidney diseas for a month past, and the pain in my back was very severe. My occupation requires a good deal of writing at night, and I suffered all the time. I saw one man who said he was cured by using Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.), and I commenced value it and the rain is enced using it, and the pain is a great deal less. I have only used two bottles, and believe it will effect a cure by the use of a few more bottles. Yours respectfully,
J. E. COLEMAN. Yours.

The Best Purifier Made.

DAMASCUS, Ga., June 29, 1887. A Remarkable Showing for B. B. B. Against Other Remedies.

PUTNAM Co., April 29, 1887.

I have been suffering for most thirty years with an itching and burning all over my face and body. I took eighteen bottles of one blood medicine and it did me no good. I commenced last January to use B. B using five bottles I felt better and stouter than I have in thirty years. My health is better and I weigh more than I ever did. The itching has nearly ceased, and I am confident that a few more bottles of B. B. B. will cure me entirely. I am sixty-two years old and can now do a good day's work in my field. I consider it the best medicine I have ever seen, for it certainly did me more good than all the medicine I have ever taken. I had, in all, nearly a hundred risings on my face, neck and body. Two Bottles Cure Rheumatism.

BOUGHTON, Ark., June 4, 1887. I cheerfully state the following facts in regard to the use of your medicine in my family. My little son, 14 years of age, suffered from an acute attack of rheumatism, caused by undue exposure and chilling of the blood. I heard your remedy highly recommended and pur-chased one bottle of Moncrief & Bro., Frescott, Ark. In about one month, after using this bottle, he became so much better that I I got the second bottle, which is now being used, and my son is nearly well, and I think by removing him to a cooler summer climate, which I will do, and continuing its use, a perfect cure will be effected. I consider B. B. B.

A Letter From Major Campbell Wallace on the Subject.

OHIO ASKS FOR INFORMATION

the Subject of Cheap Railroad Rat
-How the Railroad Commission
Works-An Excellent Letter.

The following letter, addressed to Governor Gordon, asking for information as to the railroad rate legislation, of this state, was placed in the hands of Major Campbell Wallace, thairman of the railroad commission, with the request that he should reply to it, as he was more familiar with the subject about which atta writer inquired:

more familiar with the subject about which the writer inquires:
CLEVELAND, O., February 16, 1882.—To His Excellency, General Gordon, Governor of Georgia, Atlanta, Ga: Dear Sir.—Will you kindly send the writer a copy of the bill recently passed by the legislature of Georgia reducing the railroad fare from five to two cents. The people of this state are now having a tussle with the united railroad corporations of the state over a bill now pending before the state legislature to reduce fare from three to two the state legislature to reduce fare from three to two cents.

The Chicago Tribune, in an editorial in its issue dated February 9th, says that the railroads of Georgia, since the adoption of the two cent rate, have made more money than they did before, on account of the wonderful increase in the volume of passenger traffic. Is this so? If a two cent rate is a good thing for the people of your state, we think that it would be a good thing for the people of Ohio.

If railroads can do a profitable business at a two cent rate in thinly settled Georgia, they can, of course, do a much more prosperous business in Ohio ranking third as the most populous state and the finh most thickly settled state.

You have doubtless forgotten the writer, but he had the pleasure of meeting you and also the pleasure of fistening to your logical and convincing argument made in Cleveland during the last campaign. If you will confer a favor upon the writer as well as the persons represented by the writer.

Hoping this will find you enjoying the fullest measure of good health, I am and so shall remain, Very truly yours,

F. E. Dellenbaugh.

Major Wallace's reply to the above is found in the following very interesting letter, which sets forth the advantages of the railroad commission system of this state, and shows what it has done: MAJOR WALLACE'S REPLY.

ATLANTA, Ga., February 22, 1888.—F. E. Dellenbaugh, Esq., Cleveland, Ohio: Dear sir—Your letter of the 16th addressed to his excellency, Governor Gordon, has been placed in my hands for attention, and in replying to it I send by this mail the fifteenth semi-annual report of the railroad commission of Goografie You will find in this the ordinance of the constitu tional convention, making it the duty of the legisla-ture to pass laws governing railroad companies in the transportation of persons and property; also the acts of the legislature creating a commission to carry out the requirements of the constitution and sections acts of the legislature creating a commission to carry out the requirements of the constitution and sections of the code pertaining to such duty; also the rules and regulations of the commission.

This pemphlet embraces everything in force regarding the duties, obligations and privileges of the railroad companies in the transportation of freights and passeugers. It will strike you, no doubt, as being very simple in mode and machinery, effecting as it does matters of such complex and varied magnitude, and so thorough in its ramifications. Nevertheless it is not to be discraded on account of its simplicity. Experience has shown its entire efficiency, as proven by the existing condition of transportation in this state.

The railroads of Georgia are in extra fine condiinjury to person does not come under the jurisdiction of the commission.

When the commission entered upon their duties in October, 1879, five and six cents per mile was then the ruling rates for passenger fare. In April, 1890, the commission reduced passenger fare in April, 1890, the commission reduced passenger fare for our cents per mile, and on the 1st of Februa y following, all the leading roads of the state were required to charge no more than three cents per mile. Some few short lines, and the narrow gauge roads, were allowed to collect some four and some five cents. These figures have proven satisfactory to the public, and profitable to the railroads. The increase in travel and revenue has been, and continues gradual.

The reduction in rate, to the individual passenger, has brought about a corresponding reduction in carrying persons to all political, educational, agricultural and religious conventions, associations, etc. And the rates prevalent on such occasions now vary from one cent to one-and a-half cents per mile, in proportion to the supposed magnitude of the body to assemble.

The inauguration of lower passenger rates in Georgia had its influence for general good, not only to the communities immediately affected

The inauguration of lower passenger rates in Georgia had its influence for general good, not only to the communities immediately affected thereby, but the influence flowing therefrom quickly pervaded the states around and contiguous to this, until now scarcely a leading road in the mouth charges a greater rate.

One of the most discreetly managed roads within the last few days requested the commission to issue an order limiting their passenger rate to a maximum of two and one half (2½) cents per mile for fifty miles and undertwo and one-quarter (2½) for one-hundred miles and under. less than 140 miles long and is known as the West ern and Atlantic railroad, the property of the state, but now being operated under a lease from the state. What I have said regarding the rulings of the commission in passenger transportation can be truthfully said of the transportation can be truthfully said of the transportation of freights. Our object has been to realize mates and make figures that would be "just and reasonable" for the roads as well as the people, and the prosperity of the one and the content of the other under our rulings justifies the belief that success has been phenomenal.

Our legislature has never contemplated, nor even considered the making of rates in their legislative capacity. They have wisely conferred necessary powers on a commission to make and unmake, change, revise and regulate rates from time to time as the interest of the public and the rai roads might; in the judgment of the commission demand. This commission is presumed to be continuously in session, always ready to meet any imergency. A legislative body would necessarily be unwieldy and unfitted for such work. Cast-iron rules or rates are impracticable and canno always be profitably applied in operating transportation companies.

My experiece of an average lifetime in the management of railroads in a sparsely settled territory, has demonstrated that the lowest rate that can be properly said to be just and reasonable will produce the largest revenue. If this be true in a sparsely attled state like Georgia, it requires no argument to prove that it will be doubly so in a great state like Ohio. Very truly and respectfully yours.

RAILROAD RATES.

A Letter From Major Campbell Wallace on the Subject.

ASKS FOR INFORMATION On the Subject of Chesp Railroad Rate

-How the Railroad Commission

Works-An Excellent Letter.

The following letter, addressed to Governor Gordon, asking for information as to the railroad rate legislation, of this state, was placed in the hands of Major Campbell Wallace, thairman of the railroad commission, with the request that he should reply to it, as he was more familiar with the subject about which tions of the state legislature to reduce fare from three to two cents.

The Chicago Tribune, in an editorial in its issue dated February 9th, says that the railroads of Georgia, since the adoption of the two cent rate, have made more money than they did before, on account of the wonderful increase in the volume of passenger traffic. Is this so? If a two cent rate is a good thing for the people of Your state, we think that it would be a good thing for the people of Ohio.

If railroads can do a profitable business at a two cent rate in thinly settled Georgia, they can, of course, do a much more prosperous business at a two cent rate in thinly settled Georgia, they can, of course, do a much more prosperous business in Ohio ranking third as the most populous state and the finth most thickly settled state.

You have doubtless forgotten the writer, but he had the pleasure of meeting you and also the pleasure of listening to your logical and convincing argument made in Cleveland during the last campaign. If you will kindly furnish the information desired, you will confer a favor upon the writer as well as the persons represented by the writer.

Hoping this will find you enjoying the fullest measure of good health, I am and so shall remain, Yery truly yours,

F. E. Dellenbaugh.

Old pill boxes are spread over the land by the thousands after having been emptied by suffering humanity. What a mass of sickening, disgusting medicine the poor stomach has to contend with. Too much strong medicine. Prickly Ash Bitters is rapidly and surely taking the place of all this class of drugs, and in curing all the ills arising from a disordered condition of the liver, kidneys, stomach and bowels.

The event of the week in drug circles ha been the opening of the new drug store of Matthews Gregory & Co., at 21 Marietta street, northwest corner of Broad. of Broad.

This new store is one of the handsomest in the south. It is beautifully lighted, and decorated with exquisite taste. In all good pharmacles the "prescription department" is the center of the system.

The prescription department of Matthews, Gregor & Co, is simply perfect. Instead of being cooped u behind dark colored glasses, it is open, with ever inch of it under full and perfect light. The com inch of it under full and perfect light. The compounding is done in open view, and only the most skilled pharmacists are employed. The prescription department is supplied only from the best houses, at first hands. The house has agencies for the leading firms in this country and in Europe, and the purity and unform strength of their drugs is thus assured. Dr. Walter A. Taylor, one of the most accomplished pharmacists and best druggists in the south, will give much of his personal attention to the business of this store, the Walter A. Taylor company, of which he is manager, being interested. No man better understands the importance of the utmost care in the purchase and compounding of drugs for the prescription department; and an inspection by druggists or physicians of the entire prescription begarism, its convenience, its absolute guard against mistakes, and the excellence and high standing of every drug used, is invited at all times.

Besides the prescription business, Matthews, Gregory & Co. will carry a full line of drugs, chemicals, all kinds of perfumeries, and everything to be found in the best eqipped drug stores and pharmacies. All standard patent medicines will be kept in stock, and will be sold at standard prices, a rule which will govern the conduct of this store throughout. In nothing are "cuts" so dangerous as in drugs and medicines. Above all things, excellence and uniform strength are requisite in these articles, and upon the absolute guarantee and assurance of this, and of the accuracy in prepating prescriptions, Messrs, Matthews, Gregory & Co. ask for the patronage of the public, and invite a call to examine their goods and methods.

The most efficacious stimulants to excite the appetite are ANGOSTURA BITTERS, prepared by Dr. J. G. B. Siegert & Sons. Beware of counterfeits. Ask your grocer or druggist for the genuine article.

Taylor company will move its business from 17 Noth Pryor street to the building in which Matthews, Gregory & Co.'s drugstore is located, occupying the part of the building fronting on Broad street, as well as the second story and basement of the building. The company will put in new machinery, and the business will be largely increased in every way.

NEIGHBORS OBJECT.

The Location of Ballard's Stables Cause Great Discontent.

Property Owners Who Pray That the Erec-To Consider the Petition.

pany began the erection of a stable on the northeast corner of Terry and Hunter streets.

lives next the row of stalls remonstrated against the building of the stables, and was soon joined in her remonstrance by her near neighbors. But the work progressed steadily, nevertheless, and the opposition increased in proportion until now the stable is fairly under way; the neighbors are united and urgent in their remonstrance.

Mrs. Kate O'Connor, whose property lies next the stable, was seen yesterday.

"Upon what grounds," she was asked, "do the neighbors base their opposition to the building of the stable?"

"Well, there are two nuisances—one real and the other prospective. The real nuisance and the other prospective. The real nusance is that row of open stalls. In the first place, the odor is exceedingly unpleasant. In the second place, it is unhealthy. In the third place, the mules and horses keep up a kicking and neighing all night long that disturbs the sleep of the entire neighborhood. You see, it is a transfer stable, and they are coming and going all night long. I understand that they meet every train that comes in, so you see they are kept pretty busy. Then there is, to me at least, and it must be to others, another great objection. The neighborhood is a neighborhood of homes, and a stable will injure the property. Now, that lot of mine which lies next to the stable is rented, and the lady has notified me that she is going to leave. It's an outrage. Now, the prospective nuisance. That's the house they were going to build. We filed a writ of injunction to stop that, and we'll carry it to the supreme court if necessary. There are two petitions to have the stalls removed, one in my name alone, and another which was signed by all the neighbors."

The conversation given, took place in the office of Dr. Baird, secretary of the board of health. The lady had procured a map of the neighborhood, and explained this to the doctor in connection with the petitions.

The petitions.

cuted a map of the heighborhoot, and explained this to the doctor in connection with the petitions.

The petition of the neighbors is indorsed:

"Mrs. J. W. Thompson et al. to have a nuisance abated caused by a stable, corner Hunter and Terry streets, erected by Ballard Transfer Co."

It reads:

"To the Honorable Mayor and General Council of the city of Atlanta: We, the undersigned petitioners, respectfully ask your honorable body to abate a nuisance, northeast corner of Hunter and Terry streets, on which the Ballard Transfer Co. have constructed quite a lot of stock stalls in which mules are kept and fed, very much to the disturbance of the immediate neighborhood. The kicking and other noise kept up by said mules being to such an extent as to disturb and prevent sleep at right. And besides we find the stench from said stalls to be very obnoxious." (Signed.) Z. H. Smith, P. A. Shenck, C. J. Adair, A. S. Shenck, Mrs. Kate O'Connor. L. Driscoll, Whiteford S. Smith, Mrs. A. H. Smith, J. E. Leas, James Coyen, Mrs. S. M. C. Vern, Mrs. J. W. Thompson, F. E. A. E. A. Smith, D. W. Stallings, C. A. Briderman, Mrs. Angle McHan, A. L. Branch, J. W. Humphries.

This was laid before the council, and by that body was referred to the sanitary committee. The sanitary committee sent it back to the council with the recommendation that it be referred to the board of health, and this was done February 20.

In their hands the matter rests now.

"What will become of the matter?" was asked of Dr. Baird.

"That would be hard to say just now. Monday the board meets, and we will go out in person and examine the locality. Noxt I Friday the regular meeting is held. Now there are limits beyond which the board can't go. For instance, a saw mill which simply annoys is not strictly in our province. If it is unhealthy it is our duty to say so, and if not we return the petition to council with that information to guide them. Theldisturbance, and all that, is a matter for police court. No, I couldn't give you any idea just now as to what will be done,"

A number of the neighbors were seen, and they are very indignant at the idea of having the stables built on the corner.

"Why," said the lady who lives next door, "the stalls are within four feet of my bed-room window. Then the property is depreciating in value. You see there are lots of residences right around it, and nothing but residences right around it, and nothing but residences. A nuisance like a stable will make a place unfit for a residence, but on a shop or something like that it doesn't make so much difference. It is just that kind fof property which can be most injured by the stables."

The matter is one in which all the neighbors are deeply interested, and the action of the board of health will be anxiously awaited.

Messrs. B. M. Woolley & Co.: We are established. Messrs. B. M. Woolley & Co.: We are establishing quite a demand for your Invigorine, having not sold a bottle but that it has accomplished all you claim for it. The half dozen bottles which you forwarded to Pensecoia, Fla., by our order to our friend, has accomplished wonders, as she writes us she is feeling much better than at any time in a number of years. We write to ask on what terms we can secure the exclusive agency for Invigorine, as we desire to have exclusive sale of it at this place if possible. Yours truly. D. K. McInnis & Co, ATLANTA, Ga., October 3, 1887.

I take pleasure in testifying to the great benefit I have derived from the use of your Invigorine, After suffering for several months from general debility, and using other medicines without material benefit, I have used one bottle of Invigorine, which has acted like a charm, and restored me to health. Yours very truly,

WM. WARING HABERSHAM, M. E.

It Gives Strength and Energy.

One of my neighbors wishes me to order one half dozen bottles of your Invigorine, for which I send 5. He wants the Invigorine. Mr. McCullum took your Invigorine and felt a great deal better. He thought he could make a crop, and went to work like a young man. I took your Invigorine and it gave me strength. I now sieep well, and my health is better than It has been in twelve years. Everybody that sees me says that I look ten years younger.

Regulates the Liver, Bowels and Kidneys, and Clears the Skin.

It affords me pleasure to say that the Invigorine, used by myself and wife, has had a happy effect in building up our health, restoring appetite, establishing healthy digestion, and giving cheerful spirits without any disagreeable reaction. It acted a san alterative and tonic, clearing the skin and regulating the liver, bowels and kidneys, I am in better health now than in ten years.

CARROLL'S PRAIRIE, Tex., August 6, 1886.
Inclosed find $5 for which please send me six bottles of your Invigorine. This I am ordering for my mother. If you remember, I ordered one bottle last month, and it did her so much good she has concluded to try six more. She has been in bed nine weeks, and your Invigorine is the first to restore her; so send six bottles for the $5. I am satisfied Invigorine will cure her, from the improvement of using only one bottle. Yours, YANCEYVILLE, N. C., November 1, 1886.

For many years I have been very much depressed, being old and feeble—now 73 years old. I was unable to go about much or to exert myself in any way; in fact, unfit for anything. I used a half dozen bottles of your Invigoine, and never saw such improvement. I am now strong and hearty, and attend to my business daily. Yours, etc., B. Lownes.

In Better Health Than for Years.

ATLANTA, Ga., December 9, 1886.

I have used, with astonishing results, several bottles of your Invigorine. When I began its use I was suffering so greatly from debility and nervous prostration that I entertained serious fears that my health was permanently impaired, but I am thankful to say that through the instrumentality of the health-restoring properties of Invigorine. I am now feeling much better than at any time during the past four or five years, and am entirely relieved of all apprehensions regarding my physical condition.

Wadley, Ga., January 30, 1888.

It affords me pleasare to say that your Invigorine is the finest product of the age to re-establish the prostrate fabric. It tones up the nervous system better, makes the steadiest nerves, strongest muscles and richest blood of any remedy I have ever had recourse to, and does more good in Eright's disease of the kidneys than all other remedies advertised so extensively for the cure of that trouble. It is that combination of vegetable tonics, nervines and alteratives with iron, that acts upon the secretions admirably, while it increases appetite, improves digestion, quiest irritated nerves and purifies the blood, and hence it is justly held in high esteem by the ladies for tiding them sweetly over the menopanse, that change in life that simulates so many diseases. Wisning you great success, I remain, yours truly,

BLOOD POISON REMOVED.

Home Testimony From One You All

Know.

ATLANTA, Ga., 1887.

Gents—It is with great pleasure that I bear testimony to the beneficial results of the use of Invigorine by my wife. In 1879 my wife was attacked by blood poison. For weeks she was delirious, and for several years she has been in feeble health, not able to walk and almost bind. A number of remedies were tried, but with little effect. After using the Invigorine she is fast regaining her wonted strength; can walk a mile and a half to church without fatiguling her, and her eyesight is growing better every day.

The invigorine has caused every member of my household to rejoice in the benefit conferred on my wife. I have tried it myself in several cases. I can conscientiously say that it has strengthened me more than any other remedy I ever tried. Truly, W. G. Whidby.

The Best Thing for Indigestion I have never had anything to do me so much good for indigestion as invigorine and find it almost immediate relief for all the attendant pains. I immediate rener los substitutions it. Mrs. A. H. Hunter.

Done More Good Than Any Remedy. This is to certify that Invigorine has done more ood than all other remedies used. Trouble, general debility.

ATLANTA, Ga., August 16, 1886.
Unsolicited by you, I feel it my duty to testify to you the benefit I have derived from the use of your valuable medicine, Invisorine. I had only taken a few doses of it before I feit the change in my condition. I have been a sufferer from chills and fever for seven or eight years, in Texas, and when I came to Atlanta in February last, was hardly able to walk about. But it is different now. Invigorine has, it seems, put new life in me—no chills, a good appetite, perspire freely, sleep soundly—and acts like a charm on my liver and kidneys. from both of which I have been a sufferer for seven or eight years, caused by malarial poison in my system.

VOORHEES AND VILAS

Have Quite a Time Over an Appointment.

WOORHEES DOES NOT LIKE DELAY, aggests that Even Indiana Might

WASHINGTON, February 26.—[Special.]—uite a lively war of words occurred at the interior department yesterday afternoon between Secretary Vilas.

and Senator Voorhees, It seems that Benator Voorhees went to the department to secure a position for a constituent. Secretary promised him the appoint vesterday told him he should have to postpone the matter for some weeks. Senator Voorhees became angry at the continued delay of the appointment asked for by him, and told Mr. Vilas that he could "Go to hell with his place. The administration had left Indiana out and Indiana would leave it out."

THE PRESIDENT AT HOME. The presidential party arrived here from the land of flowers at 3 o'clock this morning, when the President and Mrs. Cleveland were driven quickly to the whitehouse. Neither of them appeared down stairs until one o'clock. Mrs. Cleveland expressed herself as highly pleased with the trip, and only regretted she could not have remained longer in Florida. This afternoon I met her out driving. She is looking even more beautiful than before her departure.

WHAT TILLMAN HAS TO SAY. Congressman Tillman and his committee to day returned from Pennsylvania, where they have been investigating the strikes. He says the committee was only appointed as one of inquiry, and he can take no official action. He found a very bad state of affairs existing there, and was highly indignant at the treatment the laborers have received at the hands of the corporation officials. He says he will make a speech during the next few days in the house, and show how badly the laborers have been treated.

Congressman Phelps, ex-Postmaster General Hatton and ex-Senator Platt, of New York, held a conference here tonight for the purpose of getting up a president boom for Senator Hiscock, of New York. They have endeavored to secure the support of Murat Hal-stead, who is Sherman's champion. Halstead is now here, but as yet they have not prevailed upon him to abandon his candidate. Their purpose is to concentrate the Blaine element on Hiscock.

SOLDIERS IN CONGRESS

The present congress by many northerners has been dubbed "the congress of rebel brigadiers," on account of the fact that the majority of the southern members who were old enough at the time having participated in the "late un-pleasantness." In looking over the congresnal directory, I find that of the 121 representatives from old confederate states, 60 served in the confederate army, and of the 61 who did not, 28 were under 15 years of age when hostilities commenced, showing that all but 33 of the members from the south were either in the army or too young, and in fact, some of the 33 stayed out on account of their youth. Of the southern senators, 23 out of 32 served in the confederate army. Senator Vest, of Missouri, was a member of the house of representatives of the confederate states for two years, and a member of the senate for one. Sen-ator Reagan, of Texas, was a member of the secession convention in 1861, also a delegate to the provisional congress of the confederacy, March 6, 1861, and was appointed by President Davis postmaster-general of the confederate government, holding the place until the close of the war. In fact, counting senators who served in official capacity only six were not in the war. These six were Saulsbury and Gray, of Delaware; Call, of Florida; Beck, of Kentucky; Gorman and Wilson, of Maryland. Call may have been in the war, but his notice in the directory is silent as to the events which "stirred men's souls" in those days. Beck's Scotch blood, it is said. held him loyal to the union. Gorman, when the war broke out, although twenty-two years old, was a page in the United States senate,

Of the total 153 United States senators and representatives from the sixteen confederate states, eighty-three were actually in arms. twenty-eight were too young for military service and three were officers in the confederate and would not give up his place to go in the

On the other side of the 203 representatives from the northern states, and eight delegates from the territories only eighty-three served in the union army. Of the number who served seventy-two are republicans and eleven demo crats. Of the forty-four senators from north-ern states, only eight served in the army.

While writing of senators I find that three who are now in the United States senate were born in Georgia. They are Colquitt, George, of Mississippi, and Pugh, of Alabama. Senator Brown was born in South Carolina. Of the 324 representatives in congress, 141 were not born in the states they represent.

While talking to Senator Brown in the marble room of the senate this morning, Senator

Leland Stanford, the California millionaire joined us. He spoke of his earlier days in California when he was a butcher boy and deliv-ered meat to the miners at the different camps around his town. These were the days when the gold fever was raging in California, and he speke of the fact of the two hundred Georgians from Lumpkin county going to his town and when he was afterwards conducting a store they traded with him. He had formed an excellent opinion of Georgians from these men who were all fine fellows, and he was always glad to meet Georgians. He then spoke of the laws among the miners—that, were a man to steal he would be run from the camp or hung, but were he to kill a fellowman nothing was said or done. The subject then naturally turned on the tariff, and in arguing in favor of protection he stated that he owned a clothing factory in California where he raid his labor an average of $1.25 per day. "Why," said he, "if free trade were to exist I could move my machinery to China where I could get equally good labor for ten cents a day, bring the product back to this country and sell it for less than I can now; with free trade the factories will either have to shut down or wages paid to labor be considerebly reduced." Senator Brown agreed with him that the people, and especially the laboring classes, demand protection. During the conversation I noted, with particular interest, the many times a millionaire's personal appearance. He is stout, but well built, with a full gray beard, dresses in a neat, black Prince Albert coat, and presents a tidy appearance. He is sixty-four years of age. His wealth is said to equal the enormous sum of nearly fifty million dollars. After starting at the very bottom he worked himself up to be governor of California in 1801 and to the seu-ate in 1885.

He is probably the most popular million-of the aire, not only here, but in the entire United with
